DOG LEADS MOTHER TO DEAD BOY

Convicts Four for Bribing Lorain Sheriff

JURY'S GUILTY VERDICT SPURS OUSTER DRIVE

Decision Frees One of Five Indicted in Slot Machine Racket Inquiry.

GET 1 TO 10 YEAR TERMS

Judge Pronounces Sentences as Dem Leaders Petition to Remove Sheriff.

BULLETIN

ELYRIA — (U.P.) — Prosecutor Howard Butler today called a special Lorain county grand jury to meet next Tuesday because of disclosures during the trial of five men charged with bribery, which ended with conviction of four of them.

(By Associated Press)

ELYRIA — Conviction of four Lorain county slot machine operators on bribery charges gave impetus today to a movement to oust Sheriff William F. Grall from office.

David Crawford, jr., Harry Ziegman, William Peer and Stanton S. Hobbs were convicted last night of buying "protection" from Grall. David Crawford, sr., 71 and in frail health, was acquitted

Deliberate 9 Hours.

The jury of nine women and three men deliberated nine hours.

Common Pleas Judge Guy B. Findley sentenced the four defendants to indeterminate penitentiary terms of from one to ten years on each of two counts, the sentences to run concurrently.

Upon notice of appeal from Defense Attorney Charles Adams, Judge Findley fixed bond at $7,000 each.

Local Democratic leaders placed in circulation recall petitions against Grall, a Democrat, after he testified as a state witness that the accused paid $2.50 a week in "protection" for each machine in operation. Grall said he received a total of about $3,000 as his share of a "payoff" to Al G. Bauer, Elyria political figure.

Prosecutor Howard R. Butler declared in his final argument:

"We say these men should be found guilty and the sheriff driven out of office and forever held to shame."

Grall appeared as a state witness under a promise of immunity from prosecution.

The defendants testified they had made payments only to Bauer and not to Grall or his former chief deputy, William G. Smith,

Street Signs Go Back To Factory For New Finish

The first shipment of 200 street signs that are to be refinished without cost to the city were on their way back to the factory in Minneapolis today.

Superintendent of Streets D. D. Orewiler said that 200 of the faded markers in the southwestern part of the city had been removed by workmen.

The refinished signs are expected to be returned within two weeks at which time they will be replaced before another section of the city is canvassed, thereby causing as little inconvenience to the public as possible, Orewiler added.

The markers were sent to Lyle Signs, Inc., from whom they were purchased at the cost of $2,500 three years ago. The only cost to the city will be express charges to and from the factory.

This agreement was entered into by former Service-Safety Director Tracy C. Styert, who notified the company that the signs had been guaranteed for five years.

Board Clerk Says Issue May Boost Rate Only Half of Estimate.

KEEN BIDDING DUE

Low Interest on $550,000 In Bonds to Reduce Taxpayers' Cost.

Mansfield's $550,000 school bond issue, which was passed at a special election three weeks ago, may increase the city's tax rate only 24 hundredths of a mill (24 cents on $1,000 in property valuation), Dr. John H. Bristor, clerk of the board of education, said today.

"Indications are that we can sell the bonds for around 2.5 per cent interest, while the original estimate was 4 per cent," he said.

In the event the school board can dispose of its bonds for not more than 2.5 per cent, the additional tax rate for school bond purposes would be approximately 24 cents per $1,000 property valuation.

$1.20 Per Year Average Cost.

To illustrate what the reduction will mean to the average property owner, a taxpayer who pays a levy on $5,000 worth of property will pay only $1.20 per year more than he is paying now if the 24-cent increase goes into effect.

The 43-cent increase, as was originally estimated, would increase his annual tax bill $2.15.

As set up the total cost of the bonds would be 83 cents per $1,000, which represented an increase of only 43 cents, since enough bonds will be retired this year to cut 40 cents off the present rate.

Based on 4 Per Cent Interest.

The 83 mills tax rate which appeared on the ballots at the school bond election was based on the estimated 4 per cent interest rate and will provide for paying interest on the bonds as well as the principal.

The Mansfield board expects little trouble selling the bonds next week, since more than 50 bond firms in New York, Chicago and several Ohio cities have written or called Dr. Bristor for information about them.

He said the large number of inquiries indicated the bidding would be keen and promised a resulting low interest rate.

Bids on the bonds will be received until Oct. 21 and they will be sold on that date or soon afterwards. Bonds will be offered in $1,000 denomination.

City-Wide 'Back To Church' Move Organized, Opens Nov. 6

Mansfield civic and religious leaders laid the groundwork last night for a city-wide "back-to-church" movement which will be launched Nov. 6, designated as "Go-to-Church Sunday."

Meeting at the courthouse, 35 pastors, laymen and civic and welfare leaders elected Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston as chairman of the newly formed group and adopted the slogan: "Every Citizen in a House of Worship Every Week."

Arthur E. Courtney was elected vice president and Rev. C. L. Kern, pastor of the Main Street Evangelical church, secretary-treasurer.

Mayor C. M. Hunter, who presided as temporary chairman at last night's session, appointed the three officers and Rev. Hayes Braker, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, and Rev. H. D. Garnes, pastor of St. Luke's Lutheran church, as a committee to draw up a constitution and by-laws.

Nearly half of the city's churches, the Salvation Army, Volunteers of America and the Women's Federated Missionary societies were represented at last night's organization meeting.

Mayor Hunter pointed out that the "back-to-church" move, which is being launched throughout the nation, will not be confined to one Sunday but to all the weeks in the year.

"We are trying to make the people conscious of the benefits of church attendance and urge them to get the habit," he said.

Bromfields In Oberlin, To Make Home on Ohio Farm

Wife and 3 Children Arrive From Europe, Look for Country Place; Novelist Due Next Month.

A last-minute change in the plans of Louis Bromfield, distinguished novelist, who recently announced his intentions of returning to Mansfield, has taken the writer's wife and children to Oberlin, where the children have been entered in the public schools and where they will await the arrival of Bromfield early next month.

That Bromfield will locate in Ohio and educate his children here was indicated by Mrs. Bromfield today in a telephone conversation with The News-Journal, although there was no time in the rush of leaving war-threatened Europe three weeks ago to make definite plans, she said.

Seeks Farm In Vicinity.

Bromfield the novelist may soon be Bromfield the farmer for the writer will look for a farm somewhere in this part of Ohio, preferably between Mansfield and Oberlin, his wife said.

When it became necessary to leave their home near Senlis, France, there was no time to make plans, but the novelist had previously considered returning to Ohio to educate his children and as all of them are to be given a musical education, Oberlin was decided upon after Mrs. Bromfield landed in New York.

The children, Anne, 14, Hope, 11, and Ellen, 6, have already been entered in classes in the Oberlin schools.

Bromfield is expected in Oberlin by Nov. 15, his wife said, and as soon as he arrives, they will come to Mansfield for a visit.

He remained in France to finish business connected with their home. Bromfield's last novel, "You Get What You Give" has just been concluded as a serial in Cosmopolitan magazine. While it in no way concerns Mansfield, many of the names in it were borrowed from Mansfield streets and institutions.

Mrs. Bromfield said he would probably begin another novel as soon as they are permanently located.

ADMITS HE LIED

Conn Murder Trial Witness Recalled by State.

CADIZ—(INS)—Charles Ford, 20, colored, recalled to the stand by the prosecution today in the first degree murder trial of Barnard Masulla, said he lied in a confession in which he named himself and four others as participating in the murder of Highway Patrolman George Conn.

Ford said he confessed that he and his gang committed the Conn murder to cover up a "white slave story."

During the trial of Peter Serino, 20, Pittsburgh, Ford told a story of illegal transportation of women from one city to another for "immoral purposes." Serino was acquitted.

Masulla, who is being tried for Conn's murder, was unshaken when Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Johnson, Barnesville, identified him as one of four men they saw in Barnesville, O., the evening Conn was fatally shot.

LORAIN —(U.P.)— Mike Sayko, 48, wanted in Pittsburgh on a murder charge, was held for police there today after his capture in a corn field late yesterday, 24 hours after he had escaped from a Cleveland detective squad which had surrounded a home where he was visiting.

A posse of 20 officers had searched the countryside for five hours when Deputy Marshal John Berchak saw him hiding behind the house.

New Tension Grips Europe as Chinese Rush Troops to Block Jap Drive.

BULLETIN

KOMAROM, Hungary — (On the Czechoslovak Border)—(AP)—It was announced at 6:05 p. m. today (12:05 p. m. EST), that Czechoslovakia's answer to a Hungarian ultimatum calling for acceptance of Hungary's territorial demands by 6 p. m. would be given at 7 p. m.

(By Associated Press)

Hungary today handed Czechoslovakia an ultimatum demanding cession of territory Hungary believes should be hers by 6 p. m. (noon EST) and thousands of troops were on each side of the Hungarian - Czechoslovak border awaiting orders.

Concessions thus far offered by Czechoslovakia were held inacceptable by Hungary, whose claims to Czechoslovak territory have been regarded favorably by Adolf Hitler. Both Hungarian and Slovak delegations to the territorial conference attempting to settle the difference departed for conferences with their governments.

Stay At Odds.

Hungary was said to have demanded 8,000 square miles of Slovakia and Slovaks to have been willing to cede only 2,000 square miles.

Havas (French news agency) reported from Prague that a state of siege, a form of martial law, had been proclaimed in Mukacevo and other areas in Ruthenia, Czechoslovakia's easternmost province, as the result of disorders attributed to Hungarian terrorists who had crossed the border.

Both Hungary and Poland have been agitating for the separation of Ruthenia from the dismembered republic with a view to its union to one of them.

HUNT 3 YOUTHS

Probers in Girl's Slaying Trail Suspects in Auto.

LARCHMONT, N. Y.—(UP)—Three young men seen speeding northward through New England in an automobile became today the first suspects in the assault and murder of 17-year-old Mary Imelda Cyle.

The youths stopped at a restaurant in Norwalk, Conn. One had scratches on his face. A waiter overheard him say: "It's getting too hot for us down there. We'd better scram out of here."

Outside, they stopped in front of a stationery store. John Tray, the proprietor, heard one say: "Let's buy a paper." the youth with the scratched face replied: "No. There's too much headlines for me."

The theory was: the girl was probably knocked unconscious by the automobile crank and dragged into a car. She probably had carried her coat and beret and these, together with the crank, were thrown into the vacant lot. Then she was taken to a darkened street and assaulted.

BODY OF CHILD, 2, FOUND IN CREEK NORTH OF CITY

Mongrel Fails To Save Young Master From Blackfork, Runs To Parents Hunting In Field; Ball Floating On Water Tells Tragic Story.

The heroic attempt of "Lady," a small mongrel dog, to rescue her two-year-old master and playmate, Kenneth Heuss, from the waters of Blackfork creek failed yesterday afternoon, and the child drowned in the stream in Weller township, northeast of Mansfield.

Although "Lady" did her part by leading the boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Heuss, to the pool which hid the child's limp body, it was too late, and nearly an hour's work with an inhalator failed to revive the baby.

Excited and dripping with muddy water, "Lady," a constant companion of the child, ran to the parents who were searching in a field near the house for little Kenneth. They followed the dog to the creek and there found the boy's red rubber ball floating on the water.

The grief-stricken father dived into the pool and pulled the baby's body out. Sheriff E. P. Long and John J. Jones, Mansfield undertaker, who had been summoned by neighbors, worked over the small body, but Coroner Hugh Winbigler said the boy was dead before his body was taken from the chilly water.

The mother said she had often warned Kenneth of the dangers of the creek and never thought of looking for him there until "Lady" ran to the house.

Topples From Bank.

Both parents expressed the belief that the pet dog had attempted to pull her playmate from the creek after the child toppled in while playing along the banks.

The father, who works at the Westinghouse plant in Mansfield, was called home from a sale at a nearby farm to join in the search.

Mr. and Mrs. Heuss, who moved to their present home near the Charles rural school six months ago, have one other child, Glenn, jr., about three years old. He was with the father at the sale when Kenneth fell into the creek.

The parents said the baby might have dropped the ball in the creek and fell in while trying to reach it from the bank.

The child's body was taken to the Wappner funeral home where services will be conducted at 3 p. m. Friday by Rev. Herman L. Gilbert, pastor of St. Paul Lutheran church, Mansfield. Burial will be in the Mansfield cemetery.

Surviving, besides the parents and the older brother, are three grandparents, George Heuss and Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Ludwig of Mansfield, and two great grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Heuss, Mansfield.

IDEAL ANSWERS UNION CHARGES

Plant Superintendent Tells of Three Lay-offs Which CIO Members Protest.

Answering CIO union charges that three employes of the Ideal Electric and Manufacturing company plant were laid off last winter because of their union organization activities, Otto J. Fink, superintendent of the plant, testified at a labor board hearing today that one of the workers was reinstated "as soon as there was work for him," another was unable to work because of ill health, and the third demanded a type of work that the plant could not furnish.

Fink, who was called yesterday as a defense witness, was expected to be on the stand most of today as the Ideal company presented its defense against charges of unfair labor practices filed with the National Labor Relations board. The action was started by Local 705 of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers union, a CIO affiliate.

Fink's identification of workers and former workers at the Ideal plant revealed that a number of the persons whom the union had claimed as active members had died or left the city.

He said Roy A. Conn, a welder, was laid off last winter because work was slack and there was nothing for a worker of his skill to do in the welding department. Testimony of the union's witnesses had shown that Conn declined to work at another job for less money.

Oscar B. Killinger, another employe who was laid off during the slack season, was re-instated about a month later when operations at the plant revived a little, Fink said.

The third employe, Mrs. Doris Robinson, obtained a leave of absence to have an operation performed and has been unable to go back to work, the superintendent testified.

FIRES ROAR ON

Strong Winds Fan Blazing Forests Which Killed 20.

(By Associated Press)

Forestry officials watched anxiously today for "critical" developments as forest fires, fanned into new life by strong winds, ate through peat, brush and timber along both sides of the Minnesota-Ontario border.

In their wake the flames left 20 persons dead, many badly injured, and uncounted thousands of dollars worth of damage to homes, farm lands and hay and timber crops.

The most devastating fires on the Canadian side of the border were reported from Dance township, west of Fort Frances, Ont. It was in that section that 17 settlers were burned to death.

Little Fork, Minn., south of International Falls, was the center of the danger zone on the American side of the border.

Doomed Boy Hears Shirley Talk About Movie He'll Never See

(By International News Service)

CHICAGO—The telephone rang in a room at Mercy hospital.

"It's for you," said the nurse handing the receiver to Johnny English, 14, "a long distance call from Hollywood."

A girl's voice said:

"Hello Johnny. This is Shirley."

"Who?" said Johnny.

"Me, Shirley Temple."

Johnny's mouth dropped open. Then he looked at the nurse suspiciously.

"It's not a joke," she said. "It really is Shirley."

Johnny could hear the girl demanding imperatively:

"Hello, hello there."

Johnny said, "Hello."

"I hear you've been in the hospital," said Shirley.

"Yeah," Johnny stuttered. "I've been here about eight days. I've been sick quite a while."

Johnny has been very sick. The doctors said he would die a month ago and that only the Cubs' drive for a pennant kept him alive. He was thrilled by a visit from two of the players on the team. He suffered a relapse when the Cubs lost the world series.

"Did you get my picture?" asked Shirley.

Johnny looked up to reassure himself it was still on the dresser. "You bet," he said.

"I haven't had my dinner yet," said Shirley. "Have you had yours. Gee. I'm hungry."

Johnny didn't take the hint.

"Yeah," he said. "I had my din-

SPAIN CLOTHES ITS ARMY FOR SEVERE WINTER

Public Campaigns Started to Outfit Army; Refugees in Cities Are Problem.

(By Associated Press)

BARCELONA—The coming winter, the third of civil war, probably will be the hardest yet for government Spain.

Public campaigns have begun already to provide winter clothing for the army. Newspapers publish appeals almost daily for donations.

"One of the greatest enemies of our fighters is the cold," one of them warns.

"Mother, wife, sweetheart of the rearguard: you can aid so that their pain will not be so great. Help in the winter campaign by bringing in your donations."

Woolen sweaters, socks and coats, officials say, are the greatest need of the men in the ranks. Those at home will be asked to provide them.

Food Scarce.

Food for the overcrowded cities, packed with refugees, will be a greater problem than ever. Even this summer, in the midst of fruit and vegetable harvests, food was scarce.

Government authorities say Barcelona will see genuine suffering this winter unless food is imported in greater quantities than it has been. They report that campaigns already are mapped to raise food subscriptions in the United States and European countries.

Some help will come from the rice crop which is reported good. Farmers, aided by prison battalions, work battalions and soldiers now are harvesting it.

But more serious even than food for Barcelona's 1,500,000 will be food for Madrid's 900,000. Recent visitors to the besieged former capital say the ration has dropped to sub-normal standards.

Madrid lacks any kind of heat to resist the icy blasts from the Guadarrama mountains and intense suffering is feared for its under-nourished, poorly-clad inhabitants this winter.

Need for heating will be serious in all cities this winter if it is as cold as that of 1937-38, when unusually heavy snow fell. Few will be able to use electric heaters. With coal, oil and wood sharply limited, householders will be hard put to get enough for cooking, let alone heating.

Yet, despite the hardships in store, foreign observers believe government Spain will stick it out. Government officials and the newspapers take it for granted the war will continue.

The man on the street frequently grumbles but he seems also amazingly able to live and work in a world stripped to the bare bones of existence.

New Drug Said To Encourage Truth Telling

MONTREAL—(U.P.)—A "truth-drug" that can be used in the treatment of insane or to make criminals tell the truth has been discovered by British chemists, according to McGill university scientists.

The "truth-drug," they said, is a general anaesthetic like ether or chloroform, but instead of being inhaled it is injected intravenously.

The person receiving the drug loses consciousness, but while "going under" often becomes talkative and sometimes exceedingly frank. While "coming out" he also may make admissions.

The theory involved is that the person's mind and will are separated while under the influence of the drug. Ordinarily, the will prevents a man from making admissions which his mind tells him might be dangerous. With the will subdued, the mind gives up its store of repressed facts and opinions.

The action of the drug sometimes is helpful to the psychoanalyst in probing the mind of a patient for deeply-hidden incidents which may be the root of mental and even physical disturbances.

The McGill scientists said the drug was a member of the family of chemicals of which barbitone and veronal are better known representatives.

DOCTOR HONORED

BROOKFIELD, Vt.—(INS)—To a country doctor who for 41 years braved the whims of New England weather to care for the sick, bring babies into the world, and comfort the dying, the town recently dedicated a bronze tablet set in a 5,000-pound block of granite. "Elmer E. Ellis, M. D.—our doctor from 1896 to 1937" was inscribed on the tablet.

To Stop Constipation Get at Its Cause!

If constipation's got you down so you feel heavy, tired and dopey—it's time you did something about it. And something more than taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat only the things most people do, the chances are that a very simple fact causes your constipation—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If this is your trouble, eat crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. All-Bran contains both "bulk" and the intestinal tonic, vitamin B_1. And it's not a drug, not a medicine!

AFRAID TO MARRY + + +

CHAPTER 18.

THE NEWSPAPERS carried a story featuring Judy the next day. They used her picture and that of the girl to whom she had given the dress. They played up the whole thing as a mystery. Who was the girl who had traded dresses? Why had she done it? Where had she gone? Was it Judy Rogers, or someone who resembled her?

Marjorie telephoned her, curious and amused.

"Come to dinner and tell me about it," she urged.

"I'd love to. By the way, I have a job, Marg. I'm handling a count and an heiress. I start next week."

"Not Abbey Boland and Count Phillippe Alexis Von Gunderfield?"

"I might have known that would give it away. Not many people are marrying titles this season."

"The Count docks tomorrow."

"Do you know him?" Judy asked curiously.

"I used to. A little. Maybe I'd better warn you. He has charm, that kind that makes you think he'd skid down a glass hill to buy you a five-cent apple, and he's got a profile that should be preserved. I had an acrobatic heart about him for a month a couple of years ago. I'm well now."

"He wouldn't waste one of his priceless smiles on me. I'm a working girl. But I'll ask you a lot of questions, Marg. Is dinner at eight?"

"Same old time. Don't dress. There'll be just the two of us. The family is invited out."

* * *

Walking along Park Avenue, after she left the subway, Judy remembered another night, much earlier in the autumn, when she had hurried down the rainy street to buy a paper. Once more her pictures were on the news stands. Again she was a name to reckon with. It must mean something. Either no one knew how utterly devastated her father's fortune was, or else he was making a comeback, or the beginning of one.

She bought a white gardenia from a flower vender and fastened it at the round collar of her slim black coat. Her hat was a ridiculously small tilted plaque that held a flower bed of autumn blossoms. It tied behind her bright brown curls with a black velvet ribbon.

Half amused at the sensation her attempt to be a dance hostess had caused, she smiled to herself. She could write her memoirs—call it "Society girl on her own in New York"—and supply some really good reading material, she reflected ruefully. Well, if she won a prize in design, she could let her identity be known.

* * *

She was in a friendly humor when she entered the private lift that would take her to Marjorie's apartment. Still smiling, she rang the bell and followed the butler into the drawing room.

Then the smile became fixed, a painted grimace that didn't move. She was looking at Craig. He was smiling at her, holding out his hand, saying something.

She had put his memory aside lately. She though he did not matter so much any more. Yet here he was, flesh and blood, broad-shouldered, tall, blue-eyed. He had not changed. And her heart was crumbing just as it had crumbled before.

In a second she had regained her composure. She held out her hand, too, making a light remark, smiling disarmingly. She saw Mary at the far corner of the room, in conference with Marjorie, and joined them.

"We certainly are informal, barging into people's houses just before dinner," Mary said, and Judy noticed how rested, calm and happy she looked. "I meant to leave a message with the doorman but Marjorie was just coming in and brought us up. You see, I know the count who's taking an American bride—my cousin knows him well, and she's my reason for it. We didn't have titles in my town back home.

"There's a party planned in his honor, to meet him when he docks, I was to tell Marjorie."

"You'll go, of course, Judy," Craig said.

"No, not this time. I'm on his fiancee's staff. Think how she would feel giving the orders for wedding invitations to a girl who met the boat. I know my place, my dear!"

After that it was casual and easy to chat with Craig and Mary. When they prevailed upon Marjorie and Judy to join them for dinner at some quiet place where there was no need to dress, Judy went along willingly and enjoyed it. Her heart had righted itself. It sat calmly enough on its ledge and didn't wobble when Craig flashed her a smile, or made an allusion to that world where they had laughed together.

Judy looked at Marjorie and wondered if she had been very upset when the count had turned away, and ridden his romantic charger up another maiden's palace steps. You couldn't tell about Marjorie. She wore her mask so well it appeared real. Maybe it was. Now as for Mary, she had not grown up in the subtle society of that ultra sophistication which demanded that you take anything and everything with a long, lazy smile. Judy liked her very much, she realized.

* * *

Three days later a storm broke around Judy's head. Her father had been informed of the story in the newspapers. He had cabled her mother, learned that Judy was not with her, and investigated. Chagrined, humiliated, he wired her that he was not responsible for her behavior. He commended her to her mother's care and suggested she take the next boat to Cherbourg.

A cable from her mother followed her father's message. She was amused, hoped to see Judy sometime in the spring, and said goodbye. She was sailing the next day.

Always before, during the weeks that she had been independent and unwanted, Judy had cherished a secret consolation that she could turn to her parents if matters grew too bad. They did not want her, but they would do their duty. Now the gate had closed, the key had turned, and she might look at the tall walls forever. She was on the outside.

She felt lonely. Ronald called her a time or two but he was quite busy. So was Marjorie. The social season was in full swing. It was a month yet until the fashion group which was sponsoring the contest in design would make a decision. With a curiously letdown feeling Judy took the train, in November twilight, to the great estate of the Bolands on Long Island. She had been hired solely on Ronald's recommendation.

A station wagon met her, and the chauffeur piled her bags and boxes inside. There were a few snowflakes in the air. The road ran along the Sound for half a mile, and the clear, cold air was invigorating and fresh. It was good to be away from the city, she thought. Some place in the distance a light house lamp blinked.

* * *

Here was the drive, winding and wide. At its far end there loomed a vast white house, whose galleries and ells and additions stretched away. Lights shone, and a car or two were parked at the driveway, at the side of the entrance.

She had an impression of wealth as she followed the butler into the hall, and another servant up the deeply carpeted stairs to her own suite. She liked the bedroom at once. It was green and white, with cushions heaped on the wide window seats and the chaise lounge. There was an open wood fire, big desk with a typewriter in an alcove, a shelf of the latest books, yellow roses in copper bowls.

Living in the Boland residence might be nice, after all. She wondered where and when she would eat. She was hungry. A maid solved the problem. She appeared with a tray, covered with a crisp white napkin. There was clear hot consomme, black olives and celery, half a small roast chicken stuffed with chestnut dressing, vegetables, a green salad, an ice and coffee on the tray. Judy began to eat, welcoming the good food after her diet at the automat and the cafeterias of her neighborhood.

She was nearly through eating when there was a knock at her door.

WEARERS OF FALSE TEETH NEW VICTIMS OF MAIL RACKETEERS

(By International News Service)

BOSTON — Wearers of false teeth and women anxious to earn pin money are the newest victims of mail fraud racketeers, warned New England postal authorities.

Postal Inspector R. E. Dakin of Boston revealed that hundreds of New Englanders replied to the mail offer of a "doctor" in the middle west to repair false teeth. Scores of complaints were received from persons who mailed their teeth and a sum of money.

In a number of cases, teeth were not returned, said Dakin.

As a consequence the "doctor's" mail was impounded and many sets of teeth were seized, but names of senders frequently were missing.

Women in the rural regions were described by Inspector Dakin as the principal victims of the "work-at-home" mail propositions.

One scheme importuned housewives to make dresses at home, with a proffer by the firm to purchase the finished product. Women were instructed to send money for the material.

Returning the completed dresses, however, their makers received, not a check, but a note expressing regret that the workmanship was below standard and the dresses valueless to the company.

But the worst "headache" of all for postal authorities was the "baby chick" scheme, termed by them more a high pressure selling stunt than a racket.

It all started when poultry raisers found themselves with a surplus of chicks.

To countless prospective customers thousands of chicks were mailed without warning. For a time the mails were virtually clogged with the chicks, most of them unwanted.

One postoffice in New Hampshire sheltered 300 of them, with no takers. Finally the postal officials were compelled to halt the practice.

Faces Sentence of 15 Week-Ends In Jail for Assault

Ralph Reynolds, 128 North Benton street, must spend the next 15 week-ends in the city jail—or face the alternative of serving a 90-day sentence in the county jail.

Reynolds was ordered by Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch to report to police headquarters at 2 p. m. every Saturday for the next 15 weeks and to remain locked up until 2 p. m. Sunday after he pleaded guilty in municipal court yesterday to a charge of assault and battery. He told the court that he would lose his job if he had to serve an uninterrupted jail sentence.

Reynolds was arrested at his home Tuesday night after police had been called to settle a family argument. The affidavit was signed by his wife, Zella.

Tygers Work Hard on Defense for Invasion of Sandusky

Random Shots

Tygers Are Overdue, But . .?
Rams Should Romp Friday
Too Bad for Bucyrus Club

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sports Editor.

Here's How They'll Come Out This Week . . Maybe!

MANSFIELD AT SANDUSKY (Saturday)—The Tygers are overdue in the Sandusky series, but everything points to a Blue Streak triumph. The Streaks are strong both offensively and defensively, and their experience is a factor to consider. Their goal line has been crossed only once. It will probably take a better performance than the Tygers have produced in any game this season to trim the hosts But keep your fingers crossed. Sandusky certainly can't win 'em all.

CHARLES RUFFING

UPPER SANDUSKY AT MADISON (Friday night)—Disappointed over their failure to win at Mt. Vernon, the Rams will be fired to make amends in this one. Our guess is that the Rams will win in a walk. Upper Sandusky will take the brunt of the rebound.

BUCYRUS AT SHELBY (Friday night)—The Redmen have not shaken off the effects of the Galion whipping. They meet a team which appears just as strong as Galion in Shelby. It doesn't appear to be a question of who will win, but by how many touchdowns. The Whippets are making the Shelby fans forget some of the teams of years ago that they have been boasting about during the lean season.

BELLVILLE AT MT. GILEAD (Friday)—Balliett, Hamilton, Sheriff and company will make the Indians eat dust for some of the whippings absorbed in past campaigns. The Blue Jays can count touchdowns with any of the Class B clubs in the district.

CRESTLINE AT MT. VERNON (Friday night)—Coach Paul Snyder's Jackets lack less in the way of an offense than most Class A clubs hereabouts, but they trimmed Madison, 12-0, which holds a decision over Crestline. Crestline should make it interesting, though

NORWALK AT GALION (Friday night)—Another romp for the Orangemen, who haven't scored less than three touchdowns in any game this season.

ASHLAND AT WOOSTER (Friday night)—This looks like a Wooster triumph, but the Generals will not match the score Shelby counted against the A's.

That Dayton-Toledo Game Tops the Schedule.

QUITE A SEASON—Already the self-appointed downtown experts in Columbus are commenting on what a great season it was. They give up quickly down Columbus way.

YOU PICK IT—The game that is going to have a lot to do with deciding the mythical state collegiate title comes off in Dayton Saturday. It pits Dayton against Toledo There is little to choose on season records. The Flyers defeated Wittenberg, 38-0, Georgetown, 45-0; Cincinnati, 26-7 Toledo whipped West Liberty, 13-0; St. Josephs, 26-0, Ohio Wesleyan 26-0

SWELL, IF COMPLETED—That deal the Cleveland newspapers cooked up for the Indians and Browns would be swell for Oscar Vitt if it would come true But do you think that the Browns will dispose of their younger stars for a bunch of veterans No, not even with the $100,000

INCLUDING THE CUBS, TOO—The Yankees' Red Ruffing beat each American league team twice this season, the only major league hurler to accomplish the feat in 1938.

* * * * *

Billy Herman Reported Headed for Cardinals.

BILLY HERMAN of the Cubs is reported headed toward St Louis as manager of the Cards . . . At least two big Pacific coast schools are flirting with Carl Snavely of Cornell. . . . Good for Leo Durocher. . . . He's a hustler himself and can make others do same, which counts . . . Don't know how much truth there is in it, but New York columns have Dick Harlow headed for Penn and point out that two of his chief assistants already have showed up there to install the Harlow system

Streak Eleven Feared

Hosts' Speed to Be Difficult to Check Saturday, Murphy Believes.

THIS is "Defense Week" on the practice field at Mansfield high school

In preparation for Saturday's invasion of Sandusky, Coach Russ Murphy and his Tygers turned all of their attention to constructing defenses to halt the fleet-footed Blue Streaks.

After scouting Coach Bob Whittaker's athletes in several games, Murphy has their plays down pat, but stopping their operation is another thing.

Sandusky runs and throws from various formations in front of what Murphy considers the strongest line he has witnessed in action this year.

The Blue Streaks are as fast as Massillon, and their attack is more varied, Murphy believes. Sandusky boasts of four good backs in Blakely Balconi, Fleming and Speigle.

All are adept ball carriers, with Blakely a dangerous thrower. Blakely's passing partner is Balconi, who caught the throw that resulted in Mansfield's defeat last year.

Regular attendance at Sandusky games has convinced Murphy that the Streaks' line is virtually airtight It includes two experienced ends in Maus and Oglesby, a tackle as powerful as Maag in Brown, two veteran guards in Lesser and Deming and a capable center in Heinz.

* * *

Madison Ready For Next Foe.

SATISFIED that most of the mistakes which cropped up in the Mt. Vernon game are remedied, Coach Al Fendrick put his Rams through a light drill today in preparations for Friday night's tilt with Upper Sandusky at Madison field

The Ram are rarin' to go, too, according to Fendrick. The team came out of the game in good shape

* * *

Bellville high gridsters will be offered a chance to avenge the 7 to 6 defeat suffered last year when they go to Mt Gilead in search of their second straight Mid-State league triumph.

* * *

Shelby and Bucyrus high school teams have met 17 times, and the Whippets will be offered a chance to tie the series Friday night at Skiles field The Whippets will also have a chance to avenge the 19 to 0 1937 defeat.

* * *

Victory prospects at Ashland high were hit this week when it was learned that Fullback Joe Glass will be out of Friday night's lineup against the undefeated Wooster Generals at Wooster. Torn ligaments in the left knee is expected to keep him out of action three weeks

* * *

Galion Heavily Favored to Win.

GALION coaches look for trouble Friday night when the improving Norwalk eleven goes to the Orangemen's park, but betting odds are on the hosts.

* * *

Mt. Vernon has not been defeated in 12 straight home games. The Jackets are favored to make it 13 against Crestline Friday night, but Coach Merle Hutson's men are no push-overs

ZUPPKE HOLDS SECRET WORKOUTS FOR IRISH

CHAMPAIGN Ill —(AP)— Bob Zuppke, the wily gent who paints landscapes and coaches football, has locked the gates around the University of Illinois practice field and that gesture hints sinister designs upon eleven or more Notre Dame 'Irishmen"

Opening of practice for this Saturday's game with Notre Dame found the Illini working out in secret for the first time this year It probably had to happen eventually, but its advent before the game with the Irish and after the Illini's defeat of Indiana, loosed babbling tongues.

Ex-Tyger on Sidelines

Leroy Frederick, former Mansfield high school star, will not be in the lineup Saturday when Wittenberg invades Bowling Green. The Lutheran guard may be out of the lineup for the remainder of the season because of a leg injury, it was reported in Springfield today.

Bantams Face Akron Gridders In Fairground Debut Sunday

MANSFIELD'S bantamweight football team will make its belated debut at 2:30 p. m. Sunday against the powerful Akron De Luca outfit at the Fairground.

Sponsored by Clyde Adams, the bantams have been drilling regularly for several weeks, and Coach Harry Dandakis figures he has a team that will offer the Akron club a battle.

Whether the bantams are tough enough to halt the visitors remains doubtful as the Akron team includes a number of the members of the famous Red Pepper team.

Included among the De Luca team's victims this season are the Wooster Harris Paints and Cleveland Skippies.

Al Hamilton, business manager of the Mansfield bantams, announced that the gridiron at the Fairground has been laid out in the outfield.

He's a Tough Customer, Too

Ashland college's loss is Kent State's gain. Shown above is Carmen Falcone, Kent halfback, who spent his freshman year at Ashland. Falcone, coached by Ray Novotny, Kent assistant, in high school, is one of the outstanding backs in the state. Holbrook will probably find this out this week-end.

Nagurski's Tough; Wins After Fall

LOS ANGELES—(U P)—Bronko Nagurski, one-time Minnesota football player, missed a tackle in the wrestling ring last night, but it helped him to win his match. He lunged at his opponent, Sandor Szabo, the Hungarian, and when he skidded out of the ring on his head, Szabo's seconds wrapped their charge up in a bathrobe because they thought Nagurski unconscious.

Nagurski came to life, re-entered the ring and floored his opponent who became hopelessly entangled in the robe

Sophs Wallop Shelby, 26-7

Henke's Throws Account for Three Touchdowns.

Featuring an aerial circus that produced three touchdowns, the Mansfield high sophomores defeated the Shelby reserves, 26 to 7, in a football game in Shelby yesterday

With Henke doing the throwing, the Tyger sophs scored in the second and fourth quarters on passes

Shelby tallied its only touchdown in the first period when Ernsberger threw to Stevens and Bonecutter added the point on a buck to give the hosts a 7 to 0 lead which they held until the second period

A 30-yard pass from Henke to Prion and the former's kick from placement tied the score in the second frame

Remy fell on a blocked punt in the end zone to give Mansfield a 13 to 7 lead in the third chapter, and Henke threw to Buzard and Crawford for touchdowns in the fourth frame. A Henke to Prion pass converted another extra point.

LeMunyon started off with a 231, jumped to a 247 in the middle game and finished with a 225 to lead the Greystone club to a 2896 total and a pair of wins over the All-Stars. The Greystone club featured a middle game of 1045

K-B Coals Sign Rossford Eleven

Seek First Victory in Four Games at League Park Sunday.

ALTHOUGH defeated in three straight games, the Kallmerten & Baer Coals are not picking any soft spots.

Today Business Manager Johnny Villella announced that the Mansfield semi-pro gridsters will meet the strong Rossford Merchants at league park next Sunday.

More Trouble Ahead.

The Rossford team stacks up with the better clubs in northwestern Ohio, and it looks like another busy afternoon for Coach Gip Miller's men

Mansfield semi-pro aggregations have met the Rossford team with only fair success in former years. This season the Toledo suburban team sports an untarnished record

Strengthened by the addition of Bob Hall, a freshman star at Illinois, the Kallmerten & Baer club should produce a better brand of football Sunday.

Capable Ball Carrier.

Hall, who made his debut with the semi-pros Sunday, has added the spark Coach Miller believes the Coals need to hit a winning stride. The Illinois boy proved himself a capable ball carrier and punter.

Bears Feared In Coast Race

California Faces Toughest Test Saturday.

LOS ANGELES—(U P)—It is rapidly becoming obvious that California again is the team to beat for the Pacific coast conference title and the Rose Bowl bid If the Golden Bears reach the promised land again, chalk up a long-range triumph for Coach Stub Allison.

When the Bear coach benched his wonder boys in favor of second and third stringers early in the second half of his games last year, the natives said he was being merciful toward helpless foes

Now it is being told that Allison was doing nothing of the sort He knew all right, that six of the players who received All-America mention would be gone, but he wasn't throwing up his hands in resignation Instead, he was building an eleven for 1938 in the midst of winning the championship of 1937

Today while the critics' choices—Washington and Southern California—are having their share of troubles, the Golden Bears quietly and steadily is moving on—California 12. St Mary's 7, California 27, Washington State 3, California 48, California Aggies 0, and California 29, College of Pacific 0

Saturday the Bears face their stiffest opponent to date the dangerous, alert U S L A in the major game on the Pacific coast.

Durocher Faced By Tough Job

Gets Only 1-Year Contract to Pilot Dodgers.

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK—(AP)—One of the most eagerly sought positions in all sport, the managership of one of the 16 big league ball clubs, has been handed to Leo Durocher, 33-year-old shortstopping product of West Springfield, Mass.

Having reached the pinnacle of his profession, Durocher was so happy he barely could talk faster than 200 words a minute when he faced the metropolitan baseball writers yesterday to receive congratulations on his new job with the Brooklyns.

Tempers Joy.

His joy was tempered only by his having to be back in West Springfield today to attend the funeral of his father, a rabid baseball fan, who died Monday night

Durocher

Leo fairly bubbled as he told of his plans for the Dodgers A cynic in the back row said in an aside: "You'll notice they're only giving him a one-year contract. Wonder who they will be appointing this time next year"

And there you have one of the daffiest things about the national game. Durocher, a fine, fighting shortstop since he broke in with the Yankees 11 years ago, is so happy he could bust at the prospect of managing a seventh-place ball club—for one year.

If he is fortunate and shot with luck, maybe his contract will be renewed for 1940 But Burleigh Grimes whom Durocher succeeds in the long line of Brooklyn pilots, wouldn't advise you to bet on it.

Babe Ruth Quits.

Neither would Babe Ruth, who came out of retirement some months ago to coach for the Dodgers, and expected to fall heir to Grimes' job. They offered to let the Babe coach again next year, but he turned it down.

As he looks around him, Durocher may notice that both of his new coaches are former big league managers Bill Killefer had eight years of it, with the Chicago Cubs and the St Louis Browns Charlie Dressen piloted the Cincinnati Reds

TAPER OFF FOR B-W

CLEVELAND — (INS) — Hoping for an undefeated season, Western Reserve today tapered off for its important football game Saturday with Baldwin-Wallace.

Ohio's Bucks Concentrate On Ground Game for Wildcats

COLUMBUS—(U P)—Ohio State will unleash its hardest and fastest running attack of the season against the Northwestern Wildcats at Evanston, Ill, Saturday afternoon.

Coach Francis Schmidt, noting that Buck ground plays piled up 160 yards, 118 of them in the first half, against Southern California, apparently has relegated his famed "razzle dazzle" offensive to the background, at least temporarily.

Tricks Absent

He continued today to drill his squad in ground plays in which the tricky behind-the-line ball handling of past years was significantly absent.

More or less straight power and speed formations sent Jim Langhurst, Don Scott Frank Zadworney and Mike Kabealo into the line and shook loose around ends such speedsters as Jim Strausbaugh, Al Zuchengo, Forest Fordham and Tom Welbaum

Still dissatisfied with the execution of blocking assignments Schmidt heaped new criticism on his linemen and backs for their failure to pay closer attention to blocking out defensive players from the paths of ball-carriers

Despite Schmidt's caustic remarks, there has been notable improvement in the Bucks' blocking this week, raising hopes of sidelinners that Ohio State may upset the favored Wildcats Scouts bring word of an apparent Northwestern weakness against a well-executed running attack and that is just what Herr Schmidt plans to uncork against Saturdays foe

This strategy of course would permit smart use of the always dangerous Buck passing threat possessed by such throwers as Jim Sexton Scott, Jim Simone and Kabealo with Keith Bliss, Wendell Lohr Sam Bartschy Kabealo and Scott on the receiving end

Build for Passes.

Pass defense remains a worry for the Ohio State coaches A reserve eleven with Assistant Coach Eddie Blickle of Ohio Wesleyan fame a decade ago doing the tossing completed several forwards against the varsity Wednesday afternoon But Schmidt believes his sophomore backfielders gained valuable experience in defensive play against the trick passing attacks of Southern California and Indiana and will be ready to half any Wildcat aerial maneuvers.

The Ohio State squad runs through a final workout here today and boards a train for Evanston Friday morning arriving in time for a workout tomorrow afternoon

Rams Not to Seek Ouster of Pirates

CLEVELAND — (INS)—Although they accepted the cancellation of next Sunday's game with considerable regret, the Cleveland Rams will not press proceedings to oust the Pittsburgh Pirates from the National pro football league. Ram President Tom Lipscomb said today.

Lipscomb first announced he would seek revocation of the Pirate franchise, but later said that Joe Carr, league president, persuaded him not to do so because of the "far reaching" effects of such action

WHIZZER WHITE LEADS LEAGUE GROUND GAINERS

NEW YORK — (UP) — Byron White, the all-America back from University of Colorado led all other National professional football league ground gainers today with a total of 216 yards White, drawing a record league salary of $15,000 from the Pittsburgh Pirates for one season's work has carried the ball 81 times and has averaged 2 6 yards each time

Marshall Reported Ready to Quit Buckeye Loop

By RUSSELL FULLER

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Through speculative smoke rings which drifted idly skyward today, floated rumors of renewed dissension in the Buckeye conference

Not new were these tales of hatred and gross disregard of such a time worn sentiment as 'love thy brother" but they seemed to have taken on new meaning which forecast some sort of action

The reports, such as they were centered around three individuals They were: George Gauthier, veteran athletic director at Ohio Wesleyan; Frankie Wilton football coach at Miami university and one Cam Henderson, athletic director and football mentor at Marshall college.

As the story unfolds we find Mr. Gauthier slightly upset about a 62-to-0 walloping his boys received from Marshall on Oct 1. Wilton had the same dyspeptic reaction over a 41-to-0 whitewashing absorbed by his Miami squad from the same high-powered organization on Oct 8

About this time last year Gauthier accused Marshall of "importing" grid talent. The highly esteemed Delaware football general recently informed this writer that in his opinion "Marshall was composed of a bunch of professionals."

Last night Gauthier modified his ideas somewhat with this comment 'Some of the Buckeye conference coaches who have scouted Marshall have expressed the opinion that they just couldn't meet that kind of competition"

He added that the Marshall problem will be one worthy of "important discussion" at the conference meeting in December

Henderson, International News Service learned, is ready to pull anchor and follow the same abdication policy instigated by Cincinnati several months ago.

Gauthier and Wilton would shed no tears if Henderson decided to keep his thundering herd on its own side of the Ohio river. Marshall's withdrawal from the now five-member conference would provide a perfect setup in that Xavier and Western State teachers are due for admission next year.

BUYING SPURS MARKET AFTER HOLIDAY REST

Leading Issues Push Up to More Than Two Points in Active Session.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Renewed buying vigor returned to the stock market today, after the holiday rest, and leading issues pushed up fractions to more than 2 points, many to top levels for the past year.

Business news, brokers said, was the main stimulating influence. Domestic Copper was lifted ¼ of a cent a pound to 11 cents, a peak since last November. Zinc prices also were raised.

Conspicuous on the upside were U. S. Steel, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Anaconda, Montgomery Ward, Douglas Aircraft, Westinghouse, Santa Fe, National Dairy, and Loft.

Bonds were quiet but mostly higher. Commodities improved. London and Amsterdam securities markets tilted upward and Paris was steady. The British pound and French currency weakened in terms of the dollar.

Market analysis found inspiration in the Dun & Bradstreet summary of bank clearings for the five-day week ended yesterday. The total for 22 cities in the United States topped the corresponding 1937 week for the first time since the period of June 8, although sharply below the preceding week because of the holiday.

A more than seasonal increase in electric power consumption in the week ended Oct. 8 was noted.

who also was a prosecution witness.

The judge instructed the jury it was not necessary for the state to prove that bribes were paid personally to the sheriff, a point which the defense had emphasized.

Grall hailed the convictions as "complete vindication" for himself.

"The conviction is what I wanted when I went in to testify," he said.

The sheriff then announced he had called a conference of "some very important people" to discuss the demands he resign.

Lorain county commissioners meanwhile notified Grall that he must increase his office bond from $30,000 to $50,000 at once or be automatically disqualified.

It was the second time his bond had been ordered increased. It was raised from $15,000 a few weeks ago.

U. S. HOLDS 3RD OF MORTGAGES ON FARM LANDS

Sixth of Urban Mortgages Are Also Held by Government, Says Federal Report.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Farmers and home-owners, "largely because of favorable governmental policies, are in a stronger and more hopeful position in the nation's economic structure," the committee on debt adjustment of the Twentieth Century fund said today in reporting on its study of the nation's mortgage problem.

The federal government, as a result of its extensive refinancing activities, now holds more than a third of all the nation's farm mortgages and nearly one-sixth of the urban home mortgages, the committee reported.

The mortgage study is part of a three-year research by the committee on debt adjustment under the direction of the fund, an independent research organization endowed by the late Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant and philanthropist.

Shrinks 18 Per Cent.

In the "violent readjustments" of the depression and recovery years since 1929, the committee said, the total farm and home mortgage debt shrank more than 18 per cent to about $25,000,000,000 at the present time.

"The farmer," the report continued, "whose mortgage creditor is a federal agency has good ground for confidence that his debt burden will be adjusted downward in case of future price declines, although it is extremely unlikely that it will be adjusted upward if prices advance

"In case of future difficulty the arrangements for a government rescue party are already in existence. The lending power of the federal farm mortgage corporation lasts until the beginning of 1940, and over $500,000,000 of its power to issue bonds is unexhausted; while the bond-issuing power of the land banks is not limited either as to time or amount. The farmer—if not the taxpayer—may congratulate himself on a very comfortable solution of the farm debt problem."

The committee's report continued with some reservations about the future of city home mortgages:

"The owners of mortgaged homes are not yet out of the woods. Unless there is a very marked rise in prices—carrying rents upward—within the next few years, many of these debtors must eventually lose heavily. Moreover, the continued existence of the moratorium laws which saved so many properties during the depression has accentuated mortgage difficulties by making it unnecessary to refinance, so that removal of moratoria would swamp the market with loans immediately due and payable."

Fighting Forest Fire Which Took Many Lives

National guard officers in trucks, airplanes and thousands of men patrol the fire-ravaged Canadian border district between northern Minnesota and Ontario as the death toll reached 20 today. A strong wind fanned the fire today as it ate through peat, brush and timber on both sides of the border. Seventeen settlers were burned to death on the Canadian side while three Americans lost their lives fighting the flames. Shown above are two of the thousands who are battling the fire in southern Ontario where the blaze caused the greatest damage.

FINDS PROFITS IN FISHING BAIT

'It's a Good Business,' Says Clevelander Who Gathers Crabs, Mice, Worms.

(By United Press)

CLEVELAND— Mice, leeches, crabs, and fishing worms have enabled Tony Svetina to beat the depression.

"It's a good depression business," Tony said, transferring half a dozen mice to the bait basket of a fisherman. "When men are out of jobs, they go fishing. When their wives nag them, they go fishing. When they're sick, they go fishing. And I sell 'em bait."

Svetina is a young man and believes there is a future in selling bait. He has a small store near Lake Erie, and more often than not, it is full of customers, in lace boots, with fish-hooks in the rims of their hats.

When Svetina first went into the bait business, he had a partner—a black and white cat named Snookie. The cat was a valuable asset to the business, because he would catch field mice and bring them to his master, who would sell them at 10 cents. But someone poisoned the cat, and the bait-seller had to carry on by himself.

"Now I catch 'em with my bare hands, or with a butterfly net," he said. "I go to a field where there is some hay and there I find many mice. The fishermen use them mostly when they go to Canada—to catch the big black bass and the muskies."

For catching bullheads and catfish, the fishermen use leeches, and these are the much in demand.

"Sometimes someone comes in and wants one for a black eye, too," the bait-seller caid.

UNUSUAL NOVEL, 'REBECCA,' TOPS LIBRARY'S LIST

Story Shows How Personality of Dead Woman Survives and Dominates Others Lives.

A book that seems destined for wide circulation and much discussion is Daphne DuMaurier's "Rebecca", an amazing novel of personalities. It is one of two volumes given to the Public library by the John Baxter Black Memorial collection.

It is the story of a woman who drowned when she fell out of a sailboat, yet whose strong personality survives and dominates the lives of her husband, his second wife and his household. She seems to haunt the grounds of her husband's estate in Corwall, and the second wife is thwarted in every attempt to assume authority over the household by the constant reminders that Rebecca had arranged everything so perfectly that it must remain that way. The novel is the portrait skillfully done, of a woman of complex personality and utter heartlessness who cared for no one but herself.

The second Black Memorial book this week is "The General's Lady" by Esther Forbes. This is a novel of the Revolutionary war in which a wealthy Tory schemes to avoid confiscation of his fortune by marrying his daughter to a rebel general. The girl falls in love with a paroled British soldier and tragedy marks the end.

Mazo de la Roche, who wrote so long of the family at Jalna, writes of a new character in her last novel "Growth of A Man". This is almost the complete biography of Shaw Manifold, a Canadian boy who grows to manhood and succeeds in his struggles against poverty, ignorance and ill-health.

Another Irish Tale.

Pat Mullen, author of "Man or Aran" has written another epical tale of Irish people in "Hero Breed". Other fiction this week includes "Green Wood Burns Slow" by Brice; "Rich Girl, Poor Girl", Cuthrell; "On Sarpy Creek", Nelson; "Wandering Dogies", Tuttle; and "Running of The Deer" by Wickenden.

On the list of non-fiction this week are three titles that will be of more than ordinary interest to many readers. Eugene Lennhoff, editor of the Vienna Telegraph of Austria, gives a detailed and graphic picture of "The Last Five Hours of Austria" in the book of that title. After giving a summation of the government of Premier von Schuschnigg, the author depicts the scenes he witnessed in the streets, cafes and private homes. It is a gripping picture of humanity in chaos, a dramatic account of one of the major coups in history.

"Designing Women" by Marharetta Byers and Consuelo Kamholz, discusses the art, technique and cost of being beautiful, telling every woman how to make the most of her appearance and how to turn defects into assets. This handbook for women, written by a leading fashion writer, is packed with concrete and practical information, and is in readable form.

"I Was A Share Cropper" presents the desperate struggle for existence which is the life of the share-cropper and depicts the successful struggle of this one man for a more abundant life. Born into the family of a poverty stricken farmer, this boy struggled to educate himself and is now an author of no mean ability. He is Harry Harrison Kroll.

Other non-fiction this week includes:

"Censorship and Other Papers" by Bowerman; "Said Before Sunset", Clapp; "How to Use Pictorial Statistics", Modley; "Maine Ballads", Coffin; "Roots; Their Place in Life and Legend", Quinn; "Bright North", Evans; "Naturalist in the Guiana Forest", Hingston; "Robert's Wife", Ervine; "Selling Furs Successfully", Bachrach; "Then Came Oil", Glasscock; "Fred Farrar's Type Book"; "New Sweden on the Delaware", Ward; "Leica Manual", 3rd edition, by Morgan & Lester; "Early Far West", Ghent; "How to Become a Good Dancer", Murray; "Europe at Play" Weir; "Eighteenth Century Miscellany", edited by Kronenberger; and "Story of Reconstruction", Henry

DEFY HURRICANE

Rubber-Filled Trees Stand Up Under Wind.

WESTBURY, N. Y.—(NS)—With a preliminary survey showing 6,000 rubber-filled trees undamaged by New England's freak hurricane, George VanYahres, tree surgeon, anticipates wide uses for rubber in tree theiapy. Developed by tree experts in collaboration with B F. Goodrich laboratories, tree cavities are "filled" much as a dentist fills teeth.

GERMANS FORM ENGLISH CO-OP

200 Villagers Run Collective Farm, Headed by 'Servants' in Isolated Sector.

(By United Press)

LONDON—On the borders of Wiltshire and Gloucestershire, in England, there is a village which might be Germany itself.

Nearly all 200 villagers speak an old-fashioned German. The men are bearded and wear a kind of knee breeches, with colored shirts and homespun stockings, while the women wear old-fashioned peasant costume.

They constitute a religious community known as the Cotswol-Bruderhof, and own all property in common on their so-called village which is actually a collective farm, speaking of themselves as steward, who keeps the common one household.

Heading the community are four "Servants of the Word," whose duties include the celebration of marriage. Other officers are the purse, a distributor of work, and other responsible officials called "witness brothers."

Although isolated, these Germans show a close interest in the happenings of the world. During meals, which are eaten in one hall, some member addresses the gathering on topical affairs. They study languages, economics and history, and have a library of more than 10,000 volumes. They also publish a quarterly journal.

The Bruderhof arrived in England early in 1936, and a year later the Nazi regime suppressed the parent movement in Frankfort and confiscated their property.

This exclusive picture was made in a New York night club a moment after statuesque Elinor Troy (left) walked up to Jack Doyle, shown at right, and swung on the celebrated Irish thrush with a hefty right. Then she turned on pretty Michi Taka, Japanese dancer at the club. Elinor socked Doyle "for standing me up." Doyle made boxing history by swinging at an opponent so forcefully that he fell, struck his head, and knocked himself out.

ARMED FORCES BLUEPRINT U. S. PREPAREDNESS

Complete Set of Plans Form Mobilization Process in Event of Invasion.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Within the vast but plain white stone-fronted munitions building on Washington's broad Constitution avenue lie all the detailed plans for mobilizing the country's resources in event of emergency. It is the headquarters for national "preparedness."

This crowded building houses the bulk of both war and navy department offices, although the secretary of war still works in the old State, War and Navy building on Pennsylvania avenue.

Carefully filed plans for steps to be taken in event of invasion from any quarter even include emergency laws which would be submitted to congress.

Plans for calling out the reserves, for marshaling the National Guard into the ranks of the regular army, for a universal drafting scheme, for mobilization of industry, transportation facilities, and labor are all at the fingertips of those authorized to inspect such plans. These war blue prints are constantly being brought up to date and worked over to meet changing conditions and new possibilities.

Emergency Studied.

It is known for instance, that a commission of the war and navy departments has worked out a technique for working such a situation as a "sit-down" strike in key industries during wartime. Such a strike could seriously endanger the outcome of a war by damming up the sources of war supplies at a crucial time.

The whole of these plans, known in full as the war mobilization projects, are available to only very few persons. Hundreds work on parts of the projects but only a few know anything of all of them. The chief-of-staff of the army, the commander of the fleet of the navy, a few high-ranking subordinates, the secretary of war, the secretary of the navy, and the president, should he so desire, are the only persons having access to these plans

The last session of congress appropriated the biggest national defense budget in history Every expenditure will conform to one of the needs stipulated in the War Mobilization Projects

Within recent years those in charge of defense preparations have aimed at acquainting the public with as many respects of War Department operations as possible. Public relations departments furnish the press with a constant stream of information on the activities of the department Public war games are staged. Public co-operation is sought with the end of establishing confidence in the men who are in charge of the nation's defense plans.

EXTENDS WATER BILL DEADLINE

Secretary Reports Less Than Half Consumers Have Paid to Date.

With approximately 60 per cent of the west side water and sewer rental bills still outstanding, Fred E. Lingafelter, secretary of the city water, sewer and garbage departments today announced a half day extension of the collection period.

Lingafelter said the offices of the water department in the city building will remain open until 4 p. m. Saturday to receive payments. Bills paid to date represent only $22,000 of the $58,000 billing.

Customers who have not paid their bills by Saturday will be subject to the regular penalty of 10 per cent after that date, Lingafelter added.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1938.

Hitler says "80,000,000 people cannot be oppressed." That is, except by Hitler.

We're getting so many public playgrounds in this country that touring is just one national park after another.

If you want to get dizzy without drinking anything, just start thinking about what would happen in America if we granted autonomy to our minorities.

One Million Enough.

A NEWSPAPER sent reporters the other day to ask a number of men and women what they would do with $100,000,000 if they had Marshall Field III's recent inheritance. The people questioned were picked at random and represented a variety of occupations, including a sailor, a restaurant owner, a housewife, a garage mechanic, a jeweler, students, a truck driver, a typist, and so on.

They showed surprising agreement on two points. With only two or three exceptions these people said they would keep only $1,000,000, because that was as much as any person had a right to or could possibly use. All but two of the men said they would continue at some sort of work. The women said they would expect their husbands to go on working. Work was useful and important to character and should not be discarded.

Some of them thought they would travel for a while, or build a home, or buy a car, or all three. Better education for themselves or their children was another aim. The $99,000,000 they wouldn't keep would go to libraries, homes for crippled children, hospitals, colleges, tuberculosis and cancer research, and similar philanthropies.

Talking about a mythical hundred millions is quite different from disposing of an actual hundred millions. Some of these wise answerers might be tempted to a more riotous, or at least more selfish, way of life than they now imagine. Yet there is much reassuring judgment and good sense in the answers as given.

Emphasis on a Truism.

WHATEVER else may be said about Charles West, one-time 17th district congressman, and now a New Deal satellite, it cannot be denied that he is a master of colorful expression.

Take that terse little statement of his the other day—"He just had an emotion and mistook it for an idea."

West was speaking of a critic of his plan to appear as a Democratic campaigner in Ohio.

This comment has nothing to do with that—it isn't considering the justice or injustice of the comment as it was applied to the situation in which it was used.

And what West said, of course, isn't new in meaning. In other words it would be said that sentiment had ruled instead of reason.

It would take a "Charley" West to say it the other way.

Considered simply as an abstract statement, it gives picturesque emphasis to something that many of us do—let our sentiment rule instead of our judgment.

Maybe we can remember to avoid that fault better if we put it in West's language—let's not have emotions and mistake them for ideas.

Nerves and Traffic Lights.

DR. HOWARD FABING of the physiological laboratory of the University of Cincinnati thinks that the green and red traffic light, with its sudden changes, gives drivers the jitters and so increases traffic danger.

He would replace these signals with a new type already in use in Zurich, Switzerland, and the Red Square in Moscow.

It is a dial face divided into three sections, red, green and amber. A hand, large enough to be readily seen, moves across these sections as the hands move on a clock's face. The driver, or pedestrian, is able to watch the progress of the hand and know exactly how soon the green will change to amber and the amber to red. Adjustments of speed can then be made promptly and safely without fraying human nerves.

It sounds sensible, yet it should be remembered that temperament as much as the lights themselves causes traffic trouble. The driver who is impatient on the "caution" light now may be just as impatient with the dial. It is well to improve the signals and devices which direct drivers along the streets, but such improvement should not lull anyone into the belief that the job is then done. The human factor in safe or unsafe traffic needs training and testing and persistent education in good driving habits.

It must be admitted, however, that the red-and-green combination without the intermediate caution light is dangerous and unfair to drivers.

Less Talk, More Work.

THERE is a lot of agitation lately about business and government getting together for a joint saving of our American capitalism. President Charles R. Hook, of the National Association of Manufacturers, says:

"Industrialists want to see sound business recovery so that there will be plenty of jobs. Industry's own welfare depends on prosperous workers. Industry wants to see a higher income for every family, so that every family can afford to buy more of the products and services of industry."

It sounds reasonable and promising. That is also what workers want, and what the government and the public want. As the New York Times phrases it, we all desire "recovery and a maximum national income." The only real question is about the best way to get it.

"It would be idle," says the Times, "ever to expect complete agreement regarding these means. But candid, full and friendly discussion, and hospitality toward criticism, would undoubtedly greatly extend the field of agreement and narrow that of differences."

Hasn't there been too much discussion already? The more we get people together to discuss such matters, the more they argue, postpone and harp on their differences and exploit their favorite panaceas. Maybe the way to resume is just to resume. If everybody quit talking and went to work, we might be booming in three months.

Keeping Step

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—Pressure from New Deal and conservative sources alike is bearing down already to force congress to act this coming sessions on one of the toughest dishes on its bill of fare—legislation eliminating tax exemption from salaries and securities of state and federal governments.

By a long series of decisions beginning with Chief Justice John Marshall, the supreme court has held that the federal government can tax its own employes and securities but can't tax those of the states. In turn, the states cannot tax those of the federal government. The result has been a huge no-man's land in which billions in capital has hidden from the tax gatherer.

Supporters of such exemptions argue that with the power to tax state securities and salaries, the federal government could hamstring the states by discriminatory taxes and so destroy the dual state-federal system of government. Answering argument is that members of congress, who enact tax legislation, never would permit destruction of their own state governments.

* * *

Repeated efforts to break down this barrier by simple legislation have failed. In 1913 the constitution was amended to permit the federal government to tax income "from whatever source derived."

To many lawyers, including President Roosevelt, that language is broad enough to permit federal taxes on any sort of income, including state salaries and interest on state bonds. But when the inevitable test case arose three years later the court took a different view.

The court went back to the congressional debates on the amendment and decided that congress intended only to nullify an old constitutional requirement that federal taxes should be levied upon the states according to population. That old provision had barred income taxes because they are always largest in the big business states, such as New York.

The court held that the amendment was not designed to reach NEW sources of taxes, such as state salaries and securities. Many lawyers then and now agrred with them. Justices Brandeis and Holmes dissented, and the president dissents.

* * *

Because of the decision a vast field of income now is taxed not at all or only by one governmental division.

Senator Byrd of Virginia, conservative though he is, began the drive in 1937 to break down the tax doors and the president put his weight behind it last session. Byrd declares an amendment is necessary but the president seems to think the present court might reverse the old decision. In that case a simple act of congress would accomplish the trick.

As it stands now, 37 billion dollars of federal securities, paying approximately a billion a year in interest, is exempt from state taxes. (Most of this debt is not taxed by the federal government either, but a simple act of congress can change that.)

In addition, it is shown by figures from official sources quoted by Senator Byrd, 800,000 federal employes, drawing $1,500,000,000 in salary, are exempt from state taxes while 4,000,00 state and local officials, with their six billion dollar payroll, do not pay federal taxes.

Various sources indicate approximately 60 billion in public securities, paying interest of two billion or more yearly, are exempt in part from federal or state levies. The bulk is in the hands of private corporations or individuals.

A stiff fight is ahead. Legislation ending such exemptions not only subjects a congressman's salary to state taxes but brings upon his neck the myriads of federal employes who don't want to pay state taxes, and state employes who don't want to pay federal. Big and little investors in tax-exempt securities will be there too.

Imagine a menace like that coming up in an election year.

Ohio Anecdotes

Ransom Money.

Frequently captives taken by Indians were not put to death, but were held until friends or relatives could ransom them.

Another practice less frequently adhered to was that of allowing the white captives to work, thus earning their livelihood and finally freedom. Henry Ball, a soldier who was captured Nov. 4, 1791, at St. Clair's defeat, was taken with his wife, Polly Meadows, to a large Indian village at the mouth of the Auglaize. Here the couple was permitted to remain in a cabin. Ball earning his freedom by boating trade goods to the rapids of the Maumee, while his wife washed and sewed for the tribe.

In 1792, Oliver M. Spencer, 11, was held captive at this same village. While there he wrote an account of the village life which proved a valuable contribution to Indian history.

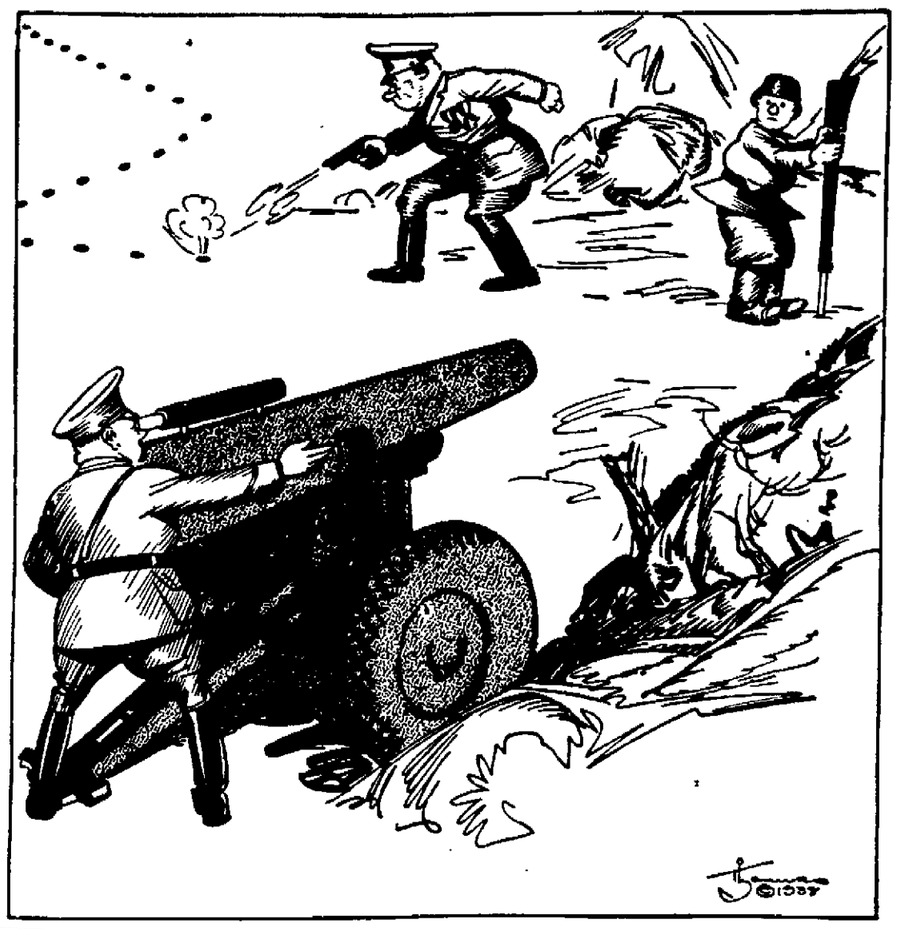
A NEW WAY TO SURVEY A BOUNDARY



Barkley In Embarrassing Spot

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky does not, after all, seem very likely to be deposed, when congress next meets, from his majority leadership in the upper legislative chamber. That is to say, indications now are that he will be permitted to continue leading, but prospects are that a considerable block of his erstwhile followers will cease to follow him. To be sure, by no means all of the senate majority have followed him hitherto, but enough of them have done so to make him at least look like a genuine leader. Prospects are that, at the next session, it will become evident that he is a merely nominal one.

This will place him in a most embarrassing position. Ditto the White House, which originally picked him for the senatorial majority leadership. In fact, it probably will be more embarrassing to both of them than it would be to have the Kentuckian voted out of his leadership altogether. And that's why the Democratic anti-New Dealers have hit upon the strategy of leaving him in it—theoretically but impotently. They didn't hit on it because of any good will toward the administration or Barkley. They hit on it on account of "pure cussedness."

* * *

Analyzing the Situation.

It will be recalled that the late Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas was the upper house Democratic leader at the time of his death in the midst of the last congressional session.

The respective party leaderships in both houses are important. True, the party leaders have only one vote apiece, just like their various followers. Nevertheless, a good leader has a deal of influence. Even a minority leader is of some consequence. A majority leader is of a lot of it—if his followers follow. Senator Robinson's followers did follow him fairly well. There was discontent with the administration, among anti-New Deal Democratic senators, but the Arkansan smothered it tolerably effectively.

Well, Robinson died suddenly. A new Democratic senate leader had to be agreed on. Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi and Senator Barkley were rival candidates.

* * *

Pat hasn't been a 100 per cent New Dealer. "Dear Alben," as President Roosevelt called Barkley, had and has been. Naturally the White House preferred Barkley. The administration is without a vote on such issues, but it can express a preference. It did express one—in Barkley's favor. And Barkley won, by one ballot; only one. The anti-New Deal Democrats were sore. They acquiesced, but grouchily. It has to be admitted that the margin was narrow.

All this is ancient history, but it has to be recollected to sense the present situation.

Then followed the congressional nominating primaries, with the administration's attempt to "purge" a handful of anti-New Deal Democrats.

The prospective "purgees" won uniformly as to the senate—not in the case of Representatives John O'Connor of New York, but he doesn't signify senatorially. The "purgee" senators all were winners. On the opposite hand, several pro-New Deal senators lost out.

The net conclusion is that the New Deal can't but be slightly weakened in the incoming senate. It won't be greatly weakened, but an extremely little weakening will be sufficient to offset that one-ballot majority in Barkley's favor.

* * *

Upon a Second Thought.

The anti-New Deal Democrats immediately let out a loud holler of rejoicing.

They would be able, they figured, to vote Barkley out of his leadership, and vote Pat Harrison, or some other anti-New Deal Democratic senator, in it.

Then they got a second thought. "Why wouldn't it," it occurred to them, "be better sport to let Barkley stay on the job, and nullify him on every issue, than simply to kick his pants out of the picture initially?"

I've heard considerable senatorial reaction in favor of the former policy.

You and Your Nation's Affairs

Raising Federal Taxes.

By ERNEST M. PATTERSON
President, American Academy of Political and Social Science.

When congress meets in January, one of the subjects to be considered will be our federal taxes. Two questions will be involved. One is how to improve and simplify our present complex system. The other which may be even more urgent will be how to increase the total federal revenue.

The growth of the federal debt will require more taxation to service it and government functions continue to increase in number and scope.

We may safely assume that taxes will grow either by raising rates of existing taxes or by the addition of new sources of revenue or both. But another issue will doubtless appear. In addition to the need for more revenue it will be urged that the tax power may and should be employed to correct the uneven distribution of the national income.

Presumably many references will be made to the recent estimate of the National Resources Committee that the average income of one-third of the families of the United States was only $471. It will be argued that the tax power should be used to take a larger part of the incomes of the wealthy rather than to raise the income taxes in the lower brackets or impose indirect taxes such as sales taxes which would raise the cost of living for poor people.

To this strenuous objections will be advanced. One will be that the tax power should be employed only to raise revenues and that general social problems should be reached in other ways. This is an old argument. It rests on the assumption that there are certain "natural" and very limited functions of government which should not be exceeded and that any attempt by government to alter the distribution of the national income should be opposed.

Probably there is no way of settling this argument by appeal to general principles. But an examination of practice in all countries shows that the tax power is very widely used in this way.

In our own country there are many illustrations. We are using tax receipts to subsidize our merchant marine, to discourage the consumption of butter substitutes, to encourage (through high import duties) the growth and continued existence of certain home industries. We have imposed a prohibitive tax on the issue of bank notes by state banks. Under the pressure of our fiscal needs and of public opinion we have income and inheritance taxes with highly progressive rates.

If we look to practice as a test, the case is clear. We have used and do use taxes in various ways that intentionally or otherwise, alter the distribution of the national income. What we shall need to do is to face any new proposals on their merits rather than appeal to vague principles.

This is not easy but two points can and should be kept clearly in mind. The first is that as matters now stand not enough revenue can be secured merely by raising taxes on the larger incomes. Regardless of our emotions and sympathies it will be necessary to lower the exemptions and to raise rates all along the line. Even so outstanding a progressive as Senator La Follette has recognized this.

A second consideration is that the taxes should be imposed and collected in a manner that will not reduce the volume of our national income. This income is in the last analysis a flow of goods and services from our farms, our factories and our various groups that render services.

We need not believe all the protests from those who, of course, do not like to pay taxes. But our economic machine is highly intricate and should not be tampered with carelessly.

Words of the Wise

Arbitrary power is most easily established on the ruins of liberty abused to licentiousness.—Worthington.

Blessed is the man who having nothing to say, abstains from giving us wordy evidence of the fact.—George Eliot.

Listen, World!

Beware What You Think.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

STRANGE how you guard against various dangers—yet entirely disregard the greatest menace of all. Speeding autos, fires, drafts, germs, crooked customers—all these you rightly fear. Yet you not only permit but actually encourage a peril which is deadlier than any disaster or disease, and daily does infinitely more harm to your life.

Meaning what? Meaning THOUGHT.

What is Thought? We don't know! With all our advancement in science and other branches of wisdom, we still don't know the How, Where or Why of the basis of all knowledge—Thought.

This doesn't worry most of us in the least. Thought, we conclude, doesn't really matter—unless we put it into action. Until then it's a brain flutter. Which, thank heaven, no one else can see.

* * *

Our Thoughts.

And we meditate, sheepishly, on some of our own thoughts. Savage Thoughts, spiteful thoughts—downright dirty ones. Not so good! They'd certainly nick your social standing if discovered. But everybody has 'em. Has to. They're a sort of safety valve. Why, if we couldn't let go sometimes and indulge in a few forbidden Thoughts we'd all go haywire!

But we're wrong. Thought DOES matter. It matters more than anything else—has more power than anything else—is, indeed the source of all power, all expression.

You doubt it? Then look around you. What are you looking at? A lot of objects? No—you are looking at a lot of Thoughts . . . Thoughts expressed in wood, metal, cloth. Every object there is simply Thought made animate—the reflection of some design that lived, first, in the mind of its maker.

And what is true of objects is also true of acts. An act has no life in itself—is only a series of gestures. It is the Thought behind the act which has life. Before an act becomes a visible gesture, it is an invisible impulse—a living idea.

* * *

"Brain Flutter."

So a Thought, instead of being "a brain flutter," is actually the core of your existence—the thing from which all action springs. Your Thought is the most living thing about you—far more living than your flesh; far more powerful.

Your Thought is the CENTER OF YOUR LIFE. You don't live in your bones, blood or muscles. These things do not determine your career, shape your character. Your Thought determines and shapes you. You live in your Thoughts.

YOU ARE WHAT YOU THINK.

Now do you begin to see the menace of Thought? You are what you think—and ALL you think? For ALL Thoughts have life. ALL Thoughts shape and determine you. Not just the proper or expedient Thoughts, but the improper ones also, the inexpedient ones, the Thoughts you're ashamed of, even the Thoughts you've forgotten — THEY ALL LIVE! AND SOONER OR LATER THEY WILL ALL FIND EXPRESSION.

* * *

Thoughts Have Life.

You can't think a thing without being marked by that thing—or without the whole world seeing that mark sooner or later.

You can't think FEAR without showing it. You may not show it with shakes and shudders. You may bellow and boast in the belief that you're registering courage. But that fear will OUT! Its chill will glaze your eyes, its slime will film your voice, and the world will know you for what you are—A COWARD.

You cannot think SPITE—or HATE—or ENVY—or LUST—or SWINISHNESS—and keep those impulses chained in den or sty. For they live. THEY LIVE! They are the only part of you that does live. Your hands, feet, mouth, ears—these things are but tools. Only your Thoughts have life.

YOU ARE WHAT YOU THINK. You are ONLY what you think. You may have physical beauty—social standing—the outward aspect of culture and authority. But you are ONLY as high or as deep, as fine or as coarse as your own THOUGHTS.

Once give a Thought life, and that life will go on and on—to build a heaven or dig a hell for you, its maker.

A Farmer's Diary

Buckwheat Harvest.

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

WE CUT and threshed the buckwheat with a combine. My neighbor who owned the outfit said that he had previously harvested just one field of this grain, and did not remember how to adjust the machine.

After he had put on the belts, greased some bearings, tried carefully the whirling dervish that scatters the straw upon the field, he lowered the cutterbar and pulled the rod that engages the combine to the take-off on the tractor.

I climbed up on the small platform in front of the grain hopper, to see how the process was carried on. Alas, at first it did a poor job! Half the grains were crushed and when I held my hand in the stream before it fell into the hopper, it was white with flour. Many kernels were bereft of hulls and the entire mass within the sheet iron bin, resembled much a mixture of salt and pepper.

But before the first round of the field was made, by changing screens and making other small adjustments, the dark three-corner grain flowed clean and uninjured into the hopper. We both felt much relieved.

It is a fine experience to ride around the field above the moving parts, and see the stream of grain drop into the bin and listen to the even movement of the tractor. Like some great, tireless, rubber-shod steed it steps gracefully and rapidly across the land, and with the combine at its heels does the work of many men.

The white bags of grain stood in huddles at one corner of the field. Three days he worked. The line of bags grew longer. The weather remained perfect. On the evening of the third day we hauled the grain away and stored it. I looked across the even field of pinkish brown stubble, and marveled at the treasure that it had borne.

To a thousand homes in many cities this tasty crop will bring broad smiles at breakfast time. My neighbor said, "It sure will make a swad o' buckwheat cakes!"

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—The text today concerns one of the best known writers in New York, a credit manager, a messenger boy, and a mysterious package that was delivered C. O. D.

It is an amazing tale, and I won't blame you too much if you are skeptical, although its veracity is easy to ascertain, for I could introduce you to this writer myself if necessary. He it was who told me the tale.

This writer, an engaging though withal a careless fellow, was very hard pressed for ready cash. And the credit manager at the hotel where he lived was becoming very impatient about the little matter of unpaid rent.

So our hero walked into the manager's office and promised to bring those accumulated arrears up to taw at once. This was fine, the manager told him. He was very pleased that the writer's intentions regarding this matter were made clear.

"Oh, don't worry about that," explained the author. "It's in the bag. I'll have all the money I need in a day or so."

* * *

WHEREFORE and without delay this affable young man crossed town and rented an apartment in another hotel. He paid the first month's rent in advance. His next step was to return to his old lodgings and wrap up a dummy package. Addressing it to himself at his new hotel, he called in a messenger and had it delivered C. O. D.

Naturally our friend wasn't on hand to receive this bundle and so the hotel, as all good hotels do, advanced the money in his behalf. The amount was $250, and the messenger pocketed the cash and vanished through the door.

He didn't return to any messenger's office, however. As a matter of record, he was as spurious as the package he delivered. He went straight back to our anxious friend and placed the $250 in his hands. And that crafty one, standing on his dignity, walked stiffly into the credit manager's office and tossed the money on his desk.

"There," he said, "I'm getting out. I must remember to tell my friends not to come here unless they want to be insulted."

The business manager was aghast. He was so sorry. He really meant no offense whatever. If his good friend would only remain he could have all the credit he desired.

But the injured one was not to be placated. And that afternoon he transferred his belongings to his new hotel.

* * *

THAT $250 advanced by the hotel? Oh, that? Oh, it'll be on his bill at the end of the month. But the month still has three weeks to run. And anything can happen in three weeks. "Why borrow trouble?" is his motto. It will come to you soon enough. Besides, a tidal wave may sweep Manhattan into the sea before the first of the month rolls around. Such a contretemps has been freely predicted by various prognosticators for the last 200 years.

It would be a shame, really, if he were to worry himself sick over a trifling sum and then have the world come to an end before it was due.

CHILD CRIME CLINIC URGED

Cleveland Plan Would Help Parents Solve Problems of Delinquency.

(By United Press)

CLEVELAND — A city child clinic to help parents solve their children's behavior problems has been suggested in the biennial report of Juvenile court.

If such a clinic is established, Cleveland will be a pioneer in this field.

The court's report, written by M. S. Laird, the court's research director, said that the clinic would aid in preventing delinquency.

"The court is sometimes asked to act in this capacity, but too often this help is requested much too late," the report said.

It added that a clinic of this type should co-operate with the public and parochial schools, the child-caring agencies and settlements, the child guidance clinic and the juvenile court. The clinic might develop to where it could take over the social treatment and readjustment of delinquents.

"At the same time its doors would be open to perplexed parents who would be encouraged voluntarily to bring behavior problems of their children for study and advice, as they now consult health clinics."

The report said that parents would bring their children to the clinic without dreading the stigma that attaches to the juvenile court. They would consult the clinic before maladjustment had developed so far that court action would be necessary.

Fewer children are being committed to correctional institutions in this city of a million, the report showed. Fifty-six per cent of those appearing in court last year were placed under the supervision of probation officers.

Book of the Week

"LISTEN! THE WIND," by Anne Morrow Lindbergh; (Harcourt, Brace; $2.50).

* * *

IT IS not difficult to appraise the news value of Anne Morrow Lindbergh's new book—anything done by anyone with the name Lindbergh is news. It is very difficult, however, to know what value the book has as literature or entertainment. This decision depends upon a number of things, but most upon the reader's capacity for hero worship.

"Listen! The Wind" is the story of the Lindbergh's flight over the South Atlantic from Africa to Brazil in December, 1933. This flight was one leg of a long swing the Lindberghs made—United States to Greenland, Iceland, Europe, Africa, South America and home.

Colonel Lindbergh has supplied the foreword, the jacket design, the maps and an appendix giving the detailed list of equipment necessary for the flight.

The value of the text lies in a certain soaring quality in the writing, and in the information it gives about two things—the technique of pioneering in the air and the character of her husband.

It is a little longer than "North to the Orient," but it is almost wholly without important incident, and reads far more slowly. In addition, it repeats itself amazingly—Mrs. Lindbergh would be accused of padding if she were (for example) Sheila Kaye-Smith, whose style she lapses into sometimes. There are literally dozens of descriptions of minor natural phenomena, states of mind, momentary flashes of insight, angles of character or behavior—some very long and very repetitive.

The strangest thing about the book is its author's persistent refusal to address her husband by name. He is invariably "he" or "my husband." When things went wrong, she usually refrained from asking about them.

Neither of them ever laughs, so far as the text indicates. Yet the partnership must be ideal, for the relationship at times has almost the quality of telepathy, and Mrs. Lindbergh is quite content to sit in the cramped back seat hour after hour in a silence, broken only by an occasional radio message.

Those interested will find most of the detail of aviation in the book. They will learn how one public hero conducts himself backstage, how his wife acts, what physical movements are made. But not a flicker of the Colonel's mental processes can be seen.

NATION'S AUTO INDUSTRY STEPS UP EMPLOYMENT

Survey Shows Most Plants Increase Schedules; Car Orders Hit New High.

(By United Press)
(Copyright, 1938)

DETROIT — A survey of the automobile industry revealed a marked acceleration of re-employment today.

The pace has quickened so that it promised to meet one of organized labor's most insistent demands—that the automobile industry might be operating on production schedules soon, which would obviate the need for the 32-hour week solution of unemployment advanced by the United Automobile Workers.

The Buick Motor Car company announced that virtually all its plants were operating two shifts on the five-day week. The company said its dealers had reported more orders for 1939 cars than they had had at any time in the past 10 years.

J. B. Graham, president of the Graham-Paige Motor company, said that "the outlook right now is better than it has been for two years."

A. E. Barit, president of Hudson, said "The general business trend presents encouraging prospects."

Sees 1938 Exceeded.

Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of the board of General Motors, predicted that his corporation's 1939 business would exceed that of 1938 and said he believed there were indications of "a long upward pull" for all business.

Company by company, the survey revealed:

Buick—Now employing 11,900 men at Flint plant and will recall 1,200 more before Nov. 1. Fisher body plant No. 1, servicing this plant, now employing 5,500 and will recall 500 more. Production schedule now calls for 7,000 cars more than original schedules and more than 8,000 men have been rehired since production started on 1939 models. Schedules call for 21,000 cars during October, 24,400 during November.

Chevrolet—Now working 9,000 men at Flint. Will rehire 3,000 more at a rate of 300 a day.

Oldsmobile—Begins double shifts at Lansing plant next week. The addition will bring total employment to 8,500, approximately double the present figure.

Chrysler—Has recalled 20,000 workers since production of 1939 cars began.

Graham-Paige—1939 production begins Monday.

Hudson—Now employing 6,000. Will be operating at capacity within a month with a force of 11,000 to 12,000.

Ford—River Rouge plant still being refitted for 1939 production which expected to begin next week. Plant normally employs 65,000.

Nash—Begins 1939 production next week.

Automotive trade papers reported a sharp increase in production this week. Automotive industries estimated car and truck production at 40,000 units, an increase of 13,000 units over last week.

Automotive news reported that production this week totaled 44,395 units as compared with 32,866 units last week. It said that, barring labor troubles, October total production should reach 225,000 units.

GALION COUPLE DESCRIBES WAR SCARE IN PARIS

Mr. and Mrs. Freese Tell of 'Blackouts,' Trench Digging While Touring Europe.

GALION—Returning from Europe this week, Mr. and Mrs. Horace E. Freese of Orange street, are telling their friends of the incidents they experienced relative to the recent war scare while they were on the continent.

They sailed from France, Oct. 1, on the U. S. Washington. The ship sailed a week earlier than the schedule because it did not make the trip to Hamburg, Germany, before crossing the Atlantic. It was believed that unsettled conditions in Germany was the reason the ship did not make its usual trip to Hamburg before taking passengers from France.

Prior to its sailing, the boat had prepared to take an added number of passengers who were fleeing from the threat of war. Furniture in the lounging rooms had been packed away and in its place had been placed sleeping cots. However, after the agreement at Munich, the extra list of passengers was not taken on board, and furniture was put back in its place.

Mr. and Mrs. Freese sailed from New York, July 23, on the New Amsterdam. Their itinerary in Europe included England, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland Italy and France.

Soldiers Parade.

They were in Germany two times; the first time they entered the country on their way from Belgium to Switzerland, and then returned to Vienna. They were in Germany a few days before Hitler and his party held a big meeting in Nunburg. At this place they saw preparations for his reception. The town was swarming with soldiers. Much evidence of war time maneuvers was seen. Army tanks were rumbling over the streets, and bombing planes were overhead. It was noted that women were at work in the fields, three and four women and sometimes one old man. All of the young men seemed to be in uniform, parading in the cities.

It took a day to go from Rome to Nice where they spent a week before going to Paris. From Nice to Paris it was another day by train. Going into Paris at night all of the blinds at the windows were lowered so that lights from the train could not be seen by air. At this time, every precaution was being taken in anticipation of an air raid. They found a dark Paris. Large bulbs of the street lights were out, with blue bulbs replacing them. Automobiles were being driven with only parking lights; headlights were out.

Ditches were being dug in the streets of Paris so that citizens might escape bombs.

Ashland College Wins Suit Over $15,000 Bequest

ASHLAND — Action contesting the will of the late Mrs. Eliza Schrock, Waterloo, Ia., including a bequest of $15,000 to Ashland college, has resulted in sustaining of the will in favor of Ashland college, it was learned here. ANDREWS JOINS PEACE PLEAS AT A.F. OF L. PARLEY

Wage-Hour Chief Calls for Prompt Settlement of Factional Fight.

(By United Press)

HOUSTON, Tex. — Wage-hour Administrator Elmer A. Andrews joined President Roosevelt today in an appeal to the American Federation of Labor convention for prompt settlement of organized labor's civil war.

"Look at the gains organized labor had made in this country in the last few years and think what it could do for itself and the nation if it were again one great united force," Andrews said.

He touched upon a point troubling both him and the national labor relations board—that the split in labor's ranks complicates their work and brings charges from both sides that they are partial to the other.

"I have good friends on both sides of these arguments," he said, "and I want to be able to ask the advice of both of them without each fellow thinking I'm going to get the wrong idea. I am fully aware that men of principle, even when they are friends, often find it hard to reconcile their differences."

Praises Accomplishments.

He praised the A. F. of L.'s accomplishments and described the fair labor standards act which he administers, defending it against Federation criticism.

He quoted Federation President William Green as saying that "the law contains every major feature and principle originally sponsored by the American Federation of Labor," and specifically answered charges of "dictator" levelled by John P. Frey, head of the Federation's metal trades department. Andrews said:

"Mr. John Frey, who has done much for the cause of labor, and whose sincere interest in the welfare of his country cannot be questioned, has been quoted as saying in connection with the administrator's power to appoint a new industry committee if his differences with the first one become irreconciliable:

"'As I see it, that is similar to a judge telling a jury that its function is to pass on the facts, but if the verdict is not satisfactory to him, he may send the case back or impanel a new jury.'

"The essential difference is that when a judge sends a case back or impanels a new jury, the defendant remains in jail or the plaintiff must wait for his money, but when the administrator differs with an industry committee and appoints a new one, there is no wage order. The administrator cannot issue a wage order except as the result of a committee recommendation. He cannot change a committee recommendation. Neither the administrator nor the committee can act without the consent of the other, just as neither house of congress can enact a law by itself."

JAM COURT AS MORALS TRIAL OPENS TODAY

Spectators Are Ordered From Hallways; Girl Testifies Against Father.

Judge C. H. Huston ordered hallways leading to the common pleas courtroom cleared of a morbid crowd of spectators today at the opening of the trial of Harry Hatfield, 42, of Shelby, charged with incest. A jury of four women and eight men is hearing the case.

The courtroom was filled and doorways were jammed when Hatfield's 17-year-old daughter the prosecution's first witness, told of her relations with her father while the two occupied the same quarters at a Shelby rooming house.

Choking back sobs, the girl, a junior in Shelby high school last year, stopped frequently in her testimony and was urged to continue by Judge Huston and Prosecutor Glenn W. Marriott who questioned her.

Denies Boy Friends.

In his cross-questioning, Atty. Frank Culp, counsel for Hatfield, asked the girl about her "dates" with other boys of her own age. She denied "going out with" all but one of them and asserted that reports that she was to be married to one of them soon were "just rumors."

She said her father did not approve of her having boy friends, adding that he said "none of them were good enough for me." The girl is to become a mother.

Arrested about a month ago by Shelby police on charges filed by the girl, Hatfield has been held since then in the county jail. He is under probation following a previous conviction on a morals charge.

Fifteen witnesses, including friends of the girl and Chief of Police Leroy Coffey of Shelby have been subpoenaed.

Business Needs More Young Men, Teachers Told

Fifty members of the Mansfield Schoolmasters' club attended a dinner-meeting of the group last night at the First Congregational church and heard a talk by V. E. (Sam) Vining, director of departmental sales at Westinghouse

Vining, who had as his subject, "The Office Boy," is leading a drive among business men to hire young men to train for their particular business He told teachers that business men stopped hiring office boys in 1929.

"Business is now operated by older men, and when they want new blood in their organization they don't have it," he said. "Young men graduating today from high schools and colleges lack three fundamentals for a business carer First—they cannot speak clearly. Second—they do not hold up their heads and look the world in the face pleasantly, and third, they cannot write a straight forward letter."

Following the dinner musical numbers were presented by the Hayden string trio, directed by A. L. Derr The trio is made up of Joseph Pival, violin, Frank Pival cello, and Ann Jeanette Klinger, piano. The meeting was in charge of Roy Spetka, president. The dinner was served by a committee of women from the church headed by Mrs. Dwight Smith.

Shelby Motorist's License Is Revoked for Year, Fined $75, in Court Here.

The driving rights of a Shelby autoist were revoked for one year and he was fined $75 and costs in municipal court yesterday when he pleaded guilty to a charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol.

The driver was David Frank Smith, 40, whose automobile crashed into a utility pole on Springmill street, Tuesday night, breaking off the pole and damaging electric light circuits and the police and fire signal system.

Police were called to the scene by John L. Maguire, 7 Johns avenue, who said Smith had sideswiped his car on North Mulberry street just a few minutes before the crash. The officers testified they found the driver at the wheel of the car which had careened across the street and struck a large rock.

A Bellville motorist, Eugene L. Kochheiser was fined $5 and costs when he pleaded guilty to a charge of operating his car with insufficient lights. Kochheiser was arrested on U. S. route 30 S. by Corporal J. E. Ruch of the state highway patrol.

IMITATES SKYROCKET

OAKLAND, Cal. —(U.P.)—When Herbert C. Toles' highly gifted talking parrot left its perch and took to a tall tree, he finally fired four skyrockets past it in an effort to make it come down. In the end he was obliged to shinny up the tree after it. Once back on its perch, the parrot was able to give a passable imitation of the noise made by a rocket whizzing past.

The successful man doesn't believe in luck.

1,500 Check Million Dollar Blaze At Oil Refinery

22 OIL TANKS EXPLODE, FIRE FIGHTERS HURT

10 Million Gallons of Oil Burn as Flames Menace Other Distillery Fields.

(By Associated Press)

LINDEN, N. J.—A weary army of 1,500 firemen and volunteers brought under control early today a costly blaze in the heart of one of the world's greatest refinery centers.

An estimated 10,000,000 gallons of oil had flamed up in 500-foot tongues shrouded in greasy black smoke. Damage was estimated unofficially at $1,000,000.

The blazing destruction began yesterday afternoon in the Cities Service company "Tank village" near here, explosions bursting one after another of nearly all of 22 tanks in the oil field.

Danger Passes.

S. P. Keator, superintendent of the plant, announced that by 5 a. m. the fire was under control and the danger past, although the oil still blazed fiercely.

Threatened continually were the Cities Service's adjacent distillery field of 30 others and larger fuel tanks as well as plants of the Sinclair Oil company and the American Cyanamide company.

A short distance away is located the huge refinery of the Standard Oil company with its 800 tanks—said to be the largest field in the world.

Two score fire-fighters were injured, none seriously, and company officials said it was a "miracle" that no one was killed when the fire started.

A 1,680,000 gallon tank exploded first. In deafening succession a half-dozen other blasts occurred, shaking buildings for many miles around. Then the fire began its steady spread.

In one part of the field a huge tank was the center of feverish struggle. Company officials said it contained deadly, highly explosive naphtha, which if ignited might wreak untold damage. Walls of foam and water protected this tank.

For a time the Sinclair field was endangered when a sudden but brief shift in the wind sent flames into the Sinclair's "Tank farm," igniting and consuming a pipe and an oil storage house.

WILLARD—The body of Howard L. Hoffman, 38, formerly of Willard, who died of a self-inflicted bullet wound in a New York City hotel Wednesday, was to arrive in the city late today.

Believed despondent because of ill health, Mr. Hoffman shot himself in the head with an automatic rifle yesterday afternoon while sitting in a chair in his hotel room, according to dispatches from New York City.

He spent some time in Willard last winter after suffering a nervous breakdown and early in the summer took treatments at Sun Valley, Idaho. He was separated from his wife.

A graduate of Willard high school and Ohio State university. Mr. Hoffman held an executive position with the General Electric company in New York for many years.

Of the many family cases that come to the attention of the Community Fund, one could be solved if furniture enough to equip a few rooms could be gathered up, it was pointed out today. . . . There is a young husband and wife and three small children. . . . His earnings bring in $17 every two weeks, of which $15 goes for furnished rooms, leaving $1 a week for food. . . . They can rent three unfurnished rooms for $15 a month, which would leave them $19 a month for food. . . . But there is no money for furnishings or bed clothes. . . . Anyone who has beds, mattresses, stove, chairs, table, floor coverings or curtains to contribute can help the family by calling the Salvation Army or the Community Fund office.

DEMAND ACTION ON PARKING PLEA

C. of C. Joins With Retail Merchants in Request for Strict Enforcement.

The Retail Merchants association which called upon city officials four weeks ago for strict enforcement of the city's parking regulations today joined forces with the Chamber of Commerce in demanding immediate action on the request.

Acting to obtain more rigid enforcement of the parking ordinances, a meeting of both organizations at which city officials have been asked to attend, will be held Monday at the chamber's assembly rooms.

The traffic and safety committees of both organizations, council's special committee on parking meters and Service-Safety Director Earl A. Nist and Police Chief Meade K. Bates are expected at the session.

Paul W. Williams, secretary-manager of the chamber said the purpose of the meeting would be to discuss the "refusal of city officials to act upon the request."

The merchants committee called on Mayor Claude M. Hunter Sept. 16 and condemned the "loose" manner in which the regulations were being enforced by the police department.

At that time they complained that persons employed in downtown offices and stores parked their automobiles on the street all day, making it impossible for shoppers to park.

They said they would favor the installation of parking meters as a solution to the problem.

SAWYER, BRICKER CARRY VOTE DRIVES INTO NORTHERN OHIO

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Standard bearers of both the Democratic and Republican parties turned the heat of vigorous election campaigns on northern Ohio today, with the exception of Robert A. Taft, G. O. P. senatorial nominee, who toured Jefferson county.

Charles Sawyer, Democratic gubernatorial candidate, and Sen. Robert J. Bulkley, New Deal stalwart seeking re-election, scheduled afternoon and evening appearances in Defiance and Findlay, following conclusion of Sawyer's swing through southern Ohio.

John W. Bricker, Republican candidate for governor, continued his three-way whirl in Cleveland after challenging Sawyer yesterday to declare his attitude towards Democratic nominees to the legislature who opposed an investigation last winter by the state senate into alleged graft in Ohio government.

Sawyer and Taft both addressed a homecoming celebration and reception for the northwest territory caravan at Belpre last night.

Using the territorial ordinance of 1787 as a foundation for his talk, Sawyer declared that:

"It is important that we in Ohio reaffirm our devotion to those basic principles of life among free people and that we take up the challenge of demonstrating to the other states in this country what we can lead the way to the fullest practical expression of those freedoms.

"Honesty and devotion to the people's will are the basis of good government and by giving Ohio good government, we are strengthening the entire Democratic structure of the nation."

Sawyer has repeatedly pledged reforms in state government if elected.

Hitting a similar stride, Taft drew a parallel between present day "pioneering" in social and economic programs and the endeavors of territorial pioneers, but used it as a barb at New Deal policies.

Miss Katherine Haag, 60, of 19 Hoffman avenue, an employe of the county treasurer's office for the last three years, died in General hospital Wednesday evening after an illness of only two days.

Surviving are three sisters, Mrs. Vern Hauserman and Mrs. Jacob Wolf of Mansfield and Mrs. John Adams of Edinburg, Texas, and three brothers, Charles of Canton and William and Fred of Mansfield.

The body was removed to the Wappner funeral home where services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Saturday with Rev. Paul Saleste officiating. Burial will be in the Mansfield cemetery.

TAKES STEPS TO BROADEN SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

New Deal Plans Amendment to Include Farm Workers, Domestic Servants.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The New Deal was developing a first line of defense against "crack pot" pension schemes today. It planned to amend and liberalize existing social security legislation early in the next congress.

Final form of administration amendments probably will be determined by President Roosevelt. The social security board has prepared an amendment program for expansion and liberalization of pension and child-aid provisions of the act.

Outstanding among them is an amendment for:

"Extending the act's coverage to include farm laborers and domestic servants, self-employed, employes in the federal reserve system banks, American seamen and persons employed by charitable institutions."

Benefits 16 Millions.

That amendment would add approximately 16,000,000 persons to the old age insurance rolls.

The social security advisory council will meet Oct. 21 to consider amendments tentatively drafted by the social security board. These include application of the act to farm laborers and others. The remaining six points of the board's tentative program are as follows:

1. Provide benefits for aged wives and widows and for young children of insured persons dying before reaching retirement age, 65.

2. Commence payment of old-age insurance annuities at an earlier date than Jan. 1, 1942. Officials said the payment date probably would be moved up to 1940 which, by coincidence, will be a presidential election year.

3. Broaden the minimum base of $10 to provide larger benefits for those retiring during the earlier years of the system. The scale runs now from $10 to $85 a month. It might be altered to run from $30 to $60 a month, reducing the maximum but giving more persons more money by increasing the base pension figure.

4. Raise the percentage of maximum federal grants for dependent children from one-third to one-half of the total cost of the project.

5. Simplify unemployment benefit procedure.

6. Achieve greater administrative economy; develop simpler methods of calculating and paying benefits; and reduce detailed work required of employers in complying with unemployment compensation provisions of the act.

FAIR ENOUGH!

Naturalized Citizens of U.S. Who Return to Their Native Land Cause Woe

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—The state department's solicitude for the status of Americans in Italy under the recent Italian decrees restricting the rights of Jews prompts a question whether this government should assume the same responsibility for naturalized Americans residing in foreign lands as for natives of this country.

The British government is cordial to political refugees and citizenship may be acquired under liberal conditions, but a British consul once explained to me that he was spared many of the problems confronting his American colleague in the same troubled foreign city because naturalized British subjects are generally required to find suitable places of abode and business somewhere within the wide range of the empire.

Great Britain, he said, was not providing credentials and the protection of the British fleet for nominal British subjects who would use the little blue passport merely to obtain special advantages in their native lands.

* * *

The American consul, on the other hand, said that it was the naturalized American, returned to the old country, who caused most of his troubles with the local authorities. At the moment he was engaged in protecting the interests of a naturalized American who had sojourned in the United States long enough to qualify for citizenship and then had returned to his home country to go into business. Counting too much on his rights as an American citizen, the man had interfered in the politics of a country under a dictatorship and then had dumped his woes in the lap of the American consul.

There are naturalized Americans living and doing business in foreign countries under the protection of the American flag who are no more American than King George VI and speak a less plausible version of the American language.

* * *

Jimmy (Vincent) Sheean, in "Person History," said that some of the American Jews in Palestine were orientalized, whatever that may mean, and said he had met a few who spoke no English at all.

The American passport is a powerful and valuable document for a foreigner, and it need not be doubted that some foreigners do acquire American citizenship with no intention to make this country their home or anything else but the goat for their troubles should they run foul of the political or police authorities in less liberal lands.

Naturalized Germans who had returned to Germany with no thought of participating in the life and responsibilities of their adopted country caused much troublesome duty for American consuls in the early days of the Hitler regime.

The World Almanac says there were 374,503 Americans living abroad on Jan. 1, 1937, and makes no distinction between natives and naturalized citizens. However, it will be remembered that in the early days of the Spanish civil war many queer fish swam into the American consulates to claim the rights and protection to which American citizens are entitled under our laws. They included borderline cases and technical Americans with only the written form of citizenship and no other interest in the country whose assistance they were demanding.

* * *

There was a case in Munich of a German who in the course of his travels had acquired American citizenship but in 15 years of residence in Germany had not even recorded his name at the consulate.

Falling into trouble with the Nazis, however, he wrapped himself in the Stars and Stripes and got away before the Germans though of asking whether his American citizenship was still valid. It wasn't, for nowadays Americans living abroad are expected to visit the nearest consul at two-year intervals and convince them that they are not merely foreigners claiming the rights of technical Americanism.

It would be unfair to forbid naturalized Americans to leave the United States at all, but it is equally foolish that aliens be allowed to glance off this country and forever after use the United States as their attorney and bodyguard. There are many naturalized Americans in foreign lands whose citizenship means just that to them and nothing more.

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Mr. James S. Moran is leaving Hollywood but he will return, have no fear, he will return.

The two—Hollywood and Moran—were made for each other. They are both in the amusement business, and they are equally adept at the manufacture of tall tales.

Moran is a slender young man with an overwhelming knack for dead-pan narration of astounding things. But he is also a man of action—preferably in the glare of headlines or spotlights. Born earlier, he might have rivaled Phineas T. Barnum, for whom he has "the greatest admiration." Still earlier, he could have dimmed the luster of fabulous Baron Munchausen.

* * *

Moran is the boy who recently decided it would be a fine thing to sell an icebox to an Eskimo. He didn't, proving either that anything is possible or that even Eskimos can be lured into commercial tie-ups. He came to Hollywood after that, naturally.

With him he brought two important character actors, discovered on the hide of an Alaskan timber wolf slain—in hand-to-hand combat of course—by our hero. Not only that, he sold the actors—trained fleas—to Paramount to replace the famed Sam and Sadie.

Sam and Sadie were those effete New Yorkers imported to bite Claudette Colbert for "Zaza." They bit but couldn't take it. Jim Moran heard of their passing, rushed down to the rescue. His own pets, he claimed, were ideal for the roles—docile troupers with artistic souls undaunted by life-long snow-blindness. That he sold his charges to the studio is only more remarkable because "Zaza" was already finished and they didn't NEED any fleas. But that's Moran.

* * *

He first attracted coast attention by his one-man expedition from home (Washington, D. C.) to hunt that famed "sea-monster" in San Francisco bay. He didn't catch it, but he did catch headlines.

"I've always been crazy," he says, without pausing as you expect him to, "about nutty ideas. Doing something different. Started when I was 11 years old and haven't stopped. It isn't true that I'm independently wealthy and can afford these things—I just do them anyway."

He works—or used to—for a Washington recording company.

But he exhibits now a wire (collect) from his organization. Its gist: "So you want money, eh? Think we're Santa Claus? You're fired."

That telegram, it seems, put a sort of do-or-die aspect on Jim's newest enterprise. From the heart of a primeval Alaskan glacier, he declares, he has extracted 250 pounds of genuine glacial ice, centuries old. Preserved in dry ice, it will be transported across country to New York, there to be sold to the highest bidder among the night clubs which appreciate "the best and the rarest."

He is thinking, he says, of driving it across country himself.

"And wouldn't it be awful," he says, "if I got caught in Death Valley and had to wire the nearest city to rush me more dry ice to keep my authentic glacial ice from melting? Hm-m."

RENEWS APPEAL

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A railroad labor leader pleaded with management today to withdraw its demand for a 15 per cent wage reduction and team up with employes and the federal government in a comprehensive rehabilitation program.

George M. Harrison, spokesman for 18 brotherhoods before the emergency fact-finding board, contended he had proved that a wage cut would offer no solution to the industry's problems.

Girl's Just Playing With Boyfriend

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 20 years old and very much in love with a girl who is a year younger than I am. I'm sure she knows that I really love her and no one else. Sometimes she tells me that it doesn't make a bit of difference to her whether we go together or not. Often I wonder if I did right in letting her know so soon what she means to me, when she's so indifferent. I think she cares for me.

We've been going "steady" for over a year now, and we have spoken of marriage. When she gets peeved about something, she tells me that we're never going to be married, but when she's in a good mood, we have lots of fun talking about our future lives together.

I have a good job right now, but feel as if I can't support her properly on what I'm making. And then on top of this, she threatens to break off with me unless I can get a job which pays more, and will try to find someone who can care for her. Please tell me what to do, and I'll appreciate it very much.

BLUE

The main trouble with you is that you take this girl and her changing moods to seriously. Some girls like to play this game, and they're very fine girls too. You've watched a cat play with a mouse haven't you? She'll lead the victim on—make it think it's getting away with some plan of its own. Then down comes her paw. Try to show a little more independence of character, and you'll have more luck.

HOROSCOPE

For Friday, October 14.

A VERY lively day is forecast, according to the lunar and mutual configurations. High hopes and wishes, expansive aims and objectives should flourish under the enhancing, productive and promoting rays of major planets. It is a time for reaching to high goals with the certainty of the co-operation of employers, superiors or those in prestige and power. But goals cannot be attained without prodence, restraint and moderation.

Those whose birthday it is are on the verge of grand opportunity for the fulfillment of their dearest desires, with the active aid of those in power and those of high influence. But tact, restraint and prudence are recommended.

A child born on this day may be versatile, energetic, resourceful and of high ambitions, although impetuous, high tempered, aggressive and audacious.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"I HAVEN'T the slightest idea what I expect to find," I began in a whisper when Miss Whitlock, flashlight in hand, had come back to me in the darkened sitting room of her tiny hotel suite. "And I may be utterly mistaken in thinking there's something queer about the supposedly vacant rooms on this floor. But if there's any espionage going on, I want to know about it."

"Of course," she whispered as I paused, and the way she uttered the simple words was a warming assurance of her unfailing aid. "Just tell me what to do."

"I want you to take turns with me in watching the corridor through the crack of this door until morning," I said. "The one not standing by the door can rest, even doze in the armchair, and if the one watching sees anything suspicious, she can put her hand on the other's shoulder."

"I'd like to amend that," she whispered back. "It will be all right to rest in the chair, but not to doze There's too much chance of an involuntary exclamation on waking, or lack of quickness in coming to the aid of the watcher."

"Right you are!" I told her. "I'll take the first watch. But first, can we open and close this door noiselessly?"

Has Oiled Them.

"I have oiled them all," she answered with a note of pardonable pride in her murmur. "They function perfectly."

"Splendid!" I returned. "Now I want you to be ready for anything."

"Assault and battery, kidnaping, anything short of murder," she retorted with a soft chuckle. She seated herself in the chair while I took down the night chain with infinite care and opened the door, leaving a crack just sufficient for me to view the corridor.

One thing I noted with satisfaction: Anyone emerging from that suite would have to go past the door behind which I was standing in order to get to the staircase, which was at the further side of the elevator almost directly in front of me.

If I had not had my illuminated wrist watch, I should have felt that I stood behind that crack in the door for six hours at least before any reward came to me. But it was in reality only three-quarters of an hour before I saw the door of the other suite moving ever so slightly. I put my hand on Miss Whitlock's shoulder, and she rose noiselessly from her chair and ranged herself beside me. For a second there was no further movement of the door or the person opening it. Then through the door stepped the buxom figure of the hotel housekeeper, with small flashlight in one hand and a deep, evidently loaded basket suspended by handles from her other hand.

Arm Stretches Out.

She took no step forward, nor did she turn to close the door. And then, outstretched past her was a long, slender arm, with an immense, oddly-carved Oriental ring upon the forefinger of the hand, which went unerringly to a button in the wall beside the door.

The next instant the lights of the hall were switched off, leaving it in total darkness, save for the single gleam of light that was creeping along the carpet from the flashlight in the hands of the housekeeper.

Yielding to an instinct for which I could give no reason, I noiselessly closed and locked our door and dropped to the floor beside it, my eyes glued to a crack beneath it, too narrow for me to see anything save the creeping gleam of light from the flashlight.

I congratulated myself on my forethought when the housekeeper stopped before the outer door of Mary's suite — I guessed that she was softly trying the door—and then, on reaching the door behind which the nurse and I were fairly holding our breath, turned the know and pressed against the lock. Apparently satisfied, she went on down the stairs, her course traced for me as well as herself by the gleam of her flashlight.

When the gleam of the flashlight had vanished, I unlocked and opened the door again, but said no word even when the hand with the ring came out of the door of the neighboring suite and switched the hall lights on again as the buzzer on the next floor sounded for the elevator.

Codfish Balls Buttered Cabbage
Tomato Salad Fried Cakes
Coffee

Codfish Balls—One cup codfish, two cups potatoes, cut in pieces; one teaspoon butter, one egg, well beaten; one-quarter teaspoon salt, a little pepper. Pick fish in small pieces, add to peeled and cut potatoes and put both in a little boiling water in a saucepan and boil gently until the potatoes are tender. Drain and mash, adding butter and seasoning and making very light. When slightly cool add beaten egg, shape in a tablespoon and drop into hot fat to brown.

Fried Cakes — One cup granulated sugar, two eggs, one teaspoon salt, one cup sweet milk, one tablespoon melted butter, one teaspoon vanilla or one-half teaspoon ground nutmeg, one tablespoon baking powder, flour enough to make dough as soft as you can handle. Beat eggs well in mixing bowl; add sugar and continue beating, then add melted butter, flavoring, part of the milk, then some of the flour sifted with salt and baking powder, then more milk, alternating flour and milk until milk is used and the dough is the right consistency. Fry in deep fat to a luscious brown.

New Uses For Neglected Vegetable

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

TOO MANY of us are constantly grumbling that we have to serve the same old vegetables, and, of course, the family does its grumbling, too. So why don't we use our imaginations and good sense in turning to neglected vegetables and doing right by them?

There's the cucumber, for example. It is nearly always on the market, but scarcely ever is used except as a salad ingredient or with salmon. So why not get busy and use the cucumber as the main ingredient for some nice vegetable dishes?

Cucumber Pudding.

Cucumber pudding, served hot or cold, is really tasty and is certainly different. The ingredients include one large cucumber, two small onions, tablespoon grated cheese, tablespoon flour, a little milk, pepper and salt and a little butter. Peel and cut up the cucumber and cook in the milk until tender. Mix the flour with the cheese and add pepper and salt. Turn into a shallow oven dish and put a few bits of butter on top. Bake for 20 minutes.

For another nice dish, peel some cucumbers and cut into quarters, removing seeds carefully. Soak in cold water for 30 minutes. Drain and cook until tender in a saucepan of boiling slightly-salted water, flavored with a teaspoon of vinegar. When cooked, drain well and place on a hot platter. Pour over a rich white sauce seasoned with pepper, salt and a little grated lemon rind. Serve, garnished with tiny triangles of toast, and take to the table at once, before cucumbers get watery.

Nice For Dinner.

A nice dinner entree or luncheon or supper dish is made by stuffing halved cucumbers with well-flavored chopped ham. Do not peel cucumbers but wrap each one in buttered grease-proof paper. Bake until tender, and serve with a cream or brown sauce.

Cucumber relish can be made with very little trouble, and it really is delicious. Take a pound each of apples and onions, one and one-half pounds cucumber, one and one-half pounds brown sugar, two ounces salt, half teaspoon cayenne pepper and a pint of vinegar. Peel, core and slice the apples, add vinegar and boil until soft. Chop onions and cucumber fine. Add salt, sugar and pepper. Mix well into apples and vinegar. Put into jars and keep for a month before using.

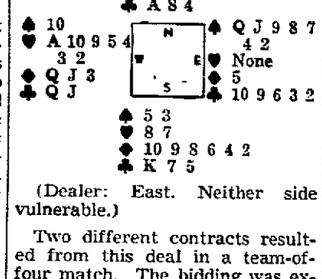
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

REPEATED DOUBLES

When you have heard nothing but ordinary passes from your partner, your doubling at the first opportunity will be interpreted as a request for action from him. If the next player bids and your associate passes, your second double is a still more urgent request for action. Most good players treat repeated doubles as still informative up to the range of bids of three.



(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

Two different contracts resulted from this deal in a team-of-four match. The bidding was exactly the same at both tables up to a certain point.

East and South passed and West opened with 1-Heart, which North doubled. East put in a 1-Spade bid and South passed again. After 2-Hearts by West, North doubled again and East bid 2-Spades. South passed and West called 3-Hearts. North injected another double, over which East bid 3-Spades.

At the table where the contract was played there, the East player was able to make it. The lead by South was the heart 8, which was taken in dummy with the A and the diamond 5 discarded. Declarer lost two trumps and two clubs.

The South player at the other table came to life after his partner's third double and put in a 4-Diamond bid which the opponents did not dispute.

* * *

Tomorrow's Problem.

(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

What defense sets South's 4-Heart contract, the original lead being the spade Q?

Ham Biscuits

Add some chopped cooked ham to the dry ingredients before you mix a batch of biscuits for a tea. When baked, do not split the biscuits but quickly spread tops with a mixture of salad dressing and butter and serve at once. It is advisable to cut the biscuit dough into very small rounds.

Fashions Change In Eyeglasses

By MME. QUI VIVE

You can engage the services of the best eye specialist in the world but if you go to an optician who is careless about fitting the frames of your glasses you can get yourself in for plenty of trouble.

A nose piece that has a way of ambling about, giving a bias slant, to vision, is an abomination, especially if you wear bifocals. Glasses must be correctly placed and they must stay put. Bows that spread or don't snuggle back of the ears can raise the dickens besides being a source of inconvenience. Frames should be examined now and then. Chucking glasses around when not in use can loosen the hinges where bows are attached to the lenses. Don't place your glasses face downward. If you do, the lenses will be scratched and that means you'll have to shell out money for new ones.

Frameless specs are inconspicuous, a joy to the woman who comes reluctantly to the realization that the old eyes aren't what they used to be, must have help. The pince-nez is usually more attractive when unbound. Yes, they do break easily.

Pink tortoise shell is a new number. It is a faint flesh color and there's no reason why any woman shouldn't use it.

Lenses come in many forms, affecting favorably the features of the face. Deep ones with a low bridge make the long nose appear shorter. No round lenses and heavy frames should be worn by the round-faced lady; the high bridge adds length to the face. When the nose is short and broad, rimless specs should be selected. She of the short face and broad nose will do well by herself if she uses deep, squarish lenses and a high nose bridge. It's all figured out for you.
